Mr. Rosenwald's Example.
Reservoir of Souls.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1928.)

YESTERDAY for the eleventh consecutive day, Wall Street bought 3,000,000 shares of stock or more. General Motors "hit a new high," an increase of 8¼ points, adding in one day $142,000,000 to the selling value of that one stock. It is the world's first THREE BILLION DOLLAR CONCERN.

Mr. Durant, who dreamed that dream and sees it come true, must wish he could have held on.

RAILROADS are cheerful. Southern Pacific, for instance, announces the highest February profit in eleven years, an improvement of $838,766 over February, 1927.

SEVERAL stocks went skyrocketing. But be careful how you deal with what brokers call the "high-priced babies." There is dynamite in some of them. And don't sell short. Tears are back of that.

A Stock Exchange seat sold for $335,000, a new record. The buyer got a bargain.

IN THE course of the day there was a "well organized and bitter bear attack." Don't laugh, please, it is no laughing matter for those bears.

CANADA has hanged George McDonald, forger, confidence man and murderer. His young wife, saved from the rope by public appeals, sent him word, "I shall never cease praying for you." She, poor woman, will have time to keep that promise, in her life imprisonment. In Canada it MEANS life imprisonment.

SPARING that woman is a step toward civilization. Once thousands a year were hanged for petty crimes. Hence the expression "as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb." Children were hanged and quartered in Franklin's childhood.

"Civilization" has stopped hanging children, and gradually will stop hanging women, and finally will STOP HANGING. And men, astonished, will see crime diminish.

IF EACH would stick to his family and his people as Julius Rosenwald does there would be fewer poorhouses and less misery.

Mr. Rosenwald gives $5,000,000 to buy farming land for his co-religionists in Russia, largest gift ever made by an individual for Jewish relief abroad.

THE ignorant, associating Jews with clothing, real estate, etc., ask "can Jews succeed at farming?" They ought to. Abraham pastured his flocks and herds long before the "Anglo-Saxon" farmer came into existence.

IT MAY be added that Mr. Rosenwald's many gifts are distinctly non-sectarian, or confined to those of his own race. He is one of the largest contributors in America to the work of the Young Men's Christian Association, Red Cross, etc.

SIR OLIVER LODGE, learned in science, says "human beings came from some reservoir of life where they had no identity. Each was given an earthly body to develop individually." Interesting, but how did they get into the reservoir?

When told that the giant Atlas supported the earth on his shoulders, a few ancient skeptics wanted to know what supported Atlas.

ON THURSDAY, Chicago believers in "deeds not words" murdered "Diamond Joe" Esposito, and the morgue keeper counted fifty-eight bullet holes in his back. Yesterday John Infanta, less important, was killed, shot only three times.

Police don't know the killers. Chief Detective Grady says, "Joe Esposito should have been bumped off ten years ago by all the laws of gangland."

ESPOSITO will have a fine funeral, in a $10,000 casket, with automobile loads of flowers. That will be some comfort.

KING SISOWAEH, of Cambodia, who reigned while the French governed, is dead and gone at last.

Doubled up in a golden urn, filled with perfumed mercury, he was burned on a great fire visible for miles. His son, Monivong, lit the fire.

At least he won't have to be in a disagreeable grave while worms do the work of dispersal.

The Weather

Cloudy, probably occasional showers tonight and Sunday. Slightly colder Sunday. Lowest temperature tonight about 50 degrees.

Its special committee appointed for a "neutral" survey of the coal mining situation having failed to function, the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce has no data or suggestions to offer the United States Senate investigators as to the solution of the problem. The Chamber committee was appointed March 6 under the chairmanship of George R. Wallace, but no meetings have been held.

Some members of the committee have asked as to the real purpose of their appointment and the same question has arisen in the board of directors of the Chamber. It is understood that the directors will demand that the committee handle its own affairs and report regularly to the board in order that the Chamber may be purged of any further implication of double-dealing on the part of coal operations who might attempt to use the civic organization to further their own ends in their fight to break the United Mine Workers of America.

The latest outbreak in the Chamber of Commerce membership flared up suddenly and in unexpected quarters. The fact that the annual election is coming next month for the naming of 12 directors of the Chamber, is said to be foreshadowed in the quiz going on within the rank and file of the organization.

"I have nothing whatever to say," was Chairman Wallace's answer to questions concerning the program of his committee. Several members of the committee said they had received no call for a meeting and some declared that they had forgotten about their appointment on it. Beside Chairman Wallace, the committee members are F. J. Chesterton, W. B. Condon, R. M. Dravo, F. J. Kress, J. C. Nevin, James Rae, Joe T. Taylor and James C. Wilson.

DOROTHY CAMPBELL

Dorothy Campbell, 14, Roxbury, Md., schoolgirl who has been held at Butler, has been released with Walter Weiland, 23, brother of Mrs. Catherine Ward, Homewood mother who recently killed her two babies, because Maryland authorities for whom they were held have failed to prosecute. "It was an elopement and we were going to be married and I wasn't kidnaped like they said and now I'm going to be a good girl and go to my sister's home and wait for Walter," the girl said. Weiland started for his home at Valencia.

Tack Slush Fund Gift On Lasker

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Albert D. Lasker, former chairman of the United States Shipping Board, contributed $25,000 to the Republican cause in 1920, of which no record was made by the late Fred W. Upham, Republican national treasurer, it was revealed today at the Senate oil inquiry.

Lasker testified he gave the money to Upham. The Upham records for 1920 showed no such contribution.

An effort of the Senate Committee to subpena Harry F. Sinclair's security records was blocked by the oil man, it was revealed later by Harold Kenwell, his secretary. Kenwell, who was subpenaed to bring the security records with him, told the committee that Sinclair refused to allow him to touch the records.

UNION WINS TILT

With only seven vacant cells left in the county jail following wholesale arrests of mine pickets, Sheriff Robert H. Braun today declared a truce in the picket war which has been waged here for the past two days.

"This weather is too nice to put people in jail," the Sheriff said, "and I don't want to arrest these fellows. We will not arrest any more of these pickets as long as they behave themselves."

The sheriff did not say what was to be done with the sixty-five union men already in jail.

No arrest was made this morning at Treveskyn, where P. T. Fagan, district United Mine Workers chief, and sixty-five union pickets were taken into custody by State police and deputy sheriffs the past two days, despite the fact that about 150 men stationed themselves along the highway in front of Maude mine for more than an hour. The usual force of deputies was on duty, in addition to a small detail of troopers from Washington, Pa., under Sergeant William Jones.

The pickets gathered in the nearby towns at 5:30 o'clock and were brought to the mine in trucks. A number of women, a few of them carrying babies, accompanied the men. Sam Caddy, international or-

Find Miner Beaten to Death

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 24.—A nonunion miner was found clubbed to death on the farm of Wilbur A. Deems, near Ritcheyville, early today.

Gorge Stanovich, 37, a married Austrian, of Ritcheyville, employed by the Ritcheyville mine of Vesta Coal Company, the victim apparently was attacked by several men as he took a short cut across the Deems farm to the mine. His full dinner pail, found near the body indicated that he was on his way to work.

Washington county detectives found four blood-stained clubs nearby. Footprints alongside a haystack 45 paces from where the body was found gave the impression that the murderers had lain in wait there for Stanovich.

2 Shot in Theater Holdup

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—Police rounded up 100 suspicious characters today for questioning in connection with the attempted holdup at the Cross Keys Theater here last night. Three bandits shot and killed Max Harrison, 27, assistant manager of the theater, and wounded Miss Martha Yetter, 17, as she was leaving the theater.

Miss Yetter, shot twice, was in a critical condition today. She was kept alive by three blood transfusions.

The bandits fled without obtaining any loot. Harrison was killed instantly. A policeman seized a bag of money which Harrison was carrying and fired at the bandits, but the latter escaped.

JOHN D. JR., HAS PLAN TO SOLVE STRIKE

By MAX HENRICI,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee is holding no hearings today in its investigation of the coal strike. The inquisitors are studying the testimony and documents laid before them this week, particularly the statements made yesterday by Charles M. Schwab, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Richard B. Mellon.

These three men are large owners of the stock of coal companies that are accused by the United Mine Workers of having broken wage agreements with them. Schwab is interested in the Bethlehem Mines Corporation, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation; Rockefeller in the Consolidation Coal Company, and Mellon in the Pittsburgh Coal Company.

GREENSBURG, Ind., March 23.—(AP.)—Henry M. He served with the Sixty-seventh Pennsylvania Company and later with the Seventh Pennsylvania Cavalry.

"TERRORISTS" BOMB MINER

In an attempt to blow up the repair shop and garage of Ignac Krek, of Presto, last night, terrorists set off a charge of dynamite which wrecked the one-story building and blew out windows in the garage and in Krek's home, about 50 feet away. State police at Bridgeville were notified and Sergt. Joseph Ughes is making an investigation.

Krek told the troopers the bombing occurred shortly after he retired at midnight. He said he believed the dynamiting to be the work of striking miners who objected to his working at the Moon Run mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company. He said he is an electrician.

The front of the garage was blown in and three automobiles stored in the building were slightly damaged. Krek, his wife, five children and two grandchildren were asleep in the house. The damage was estimated at $1,000.

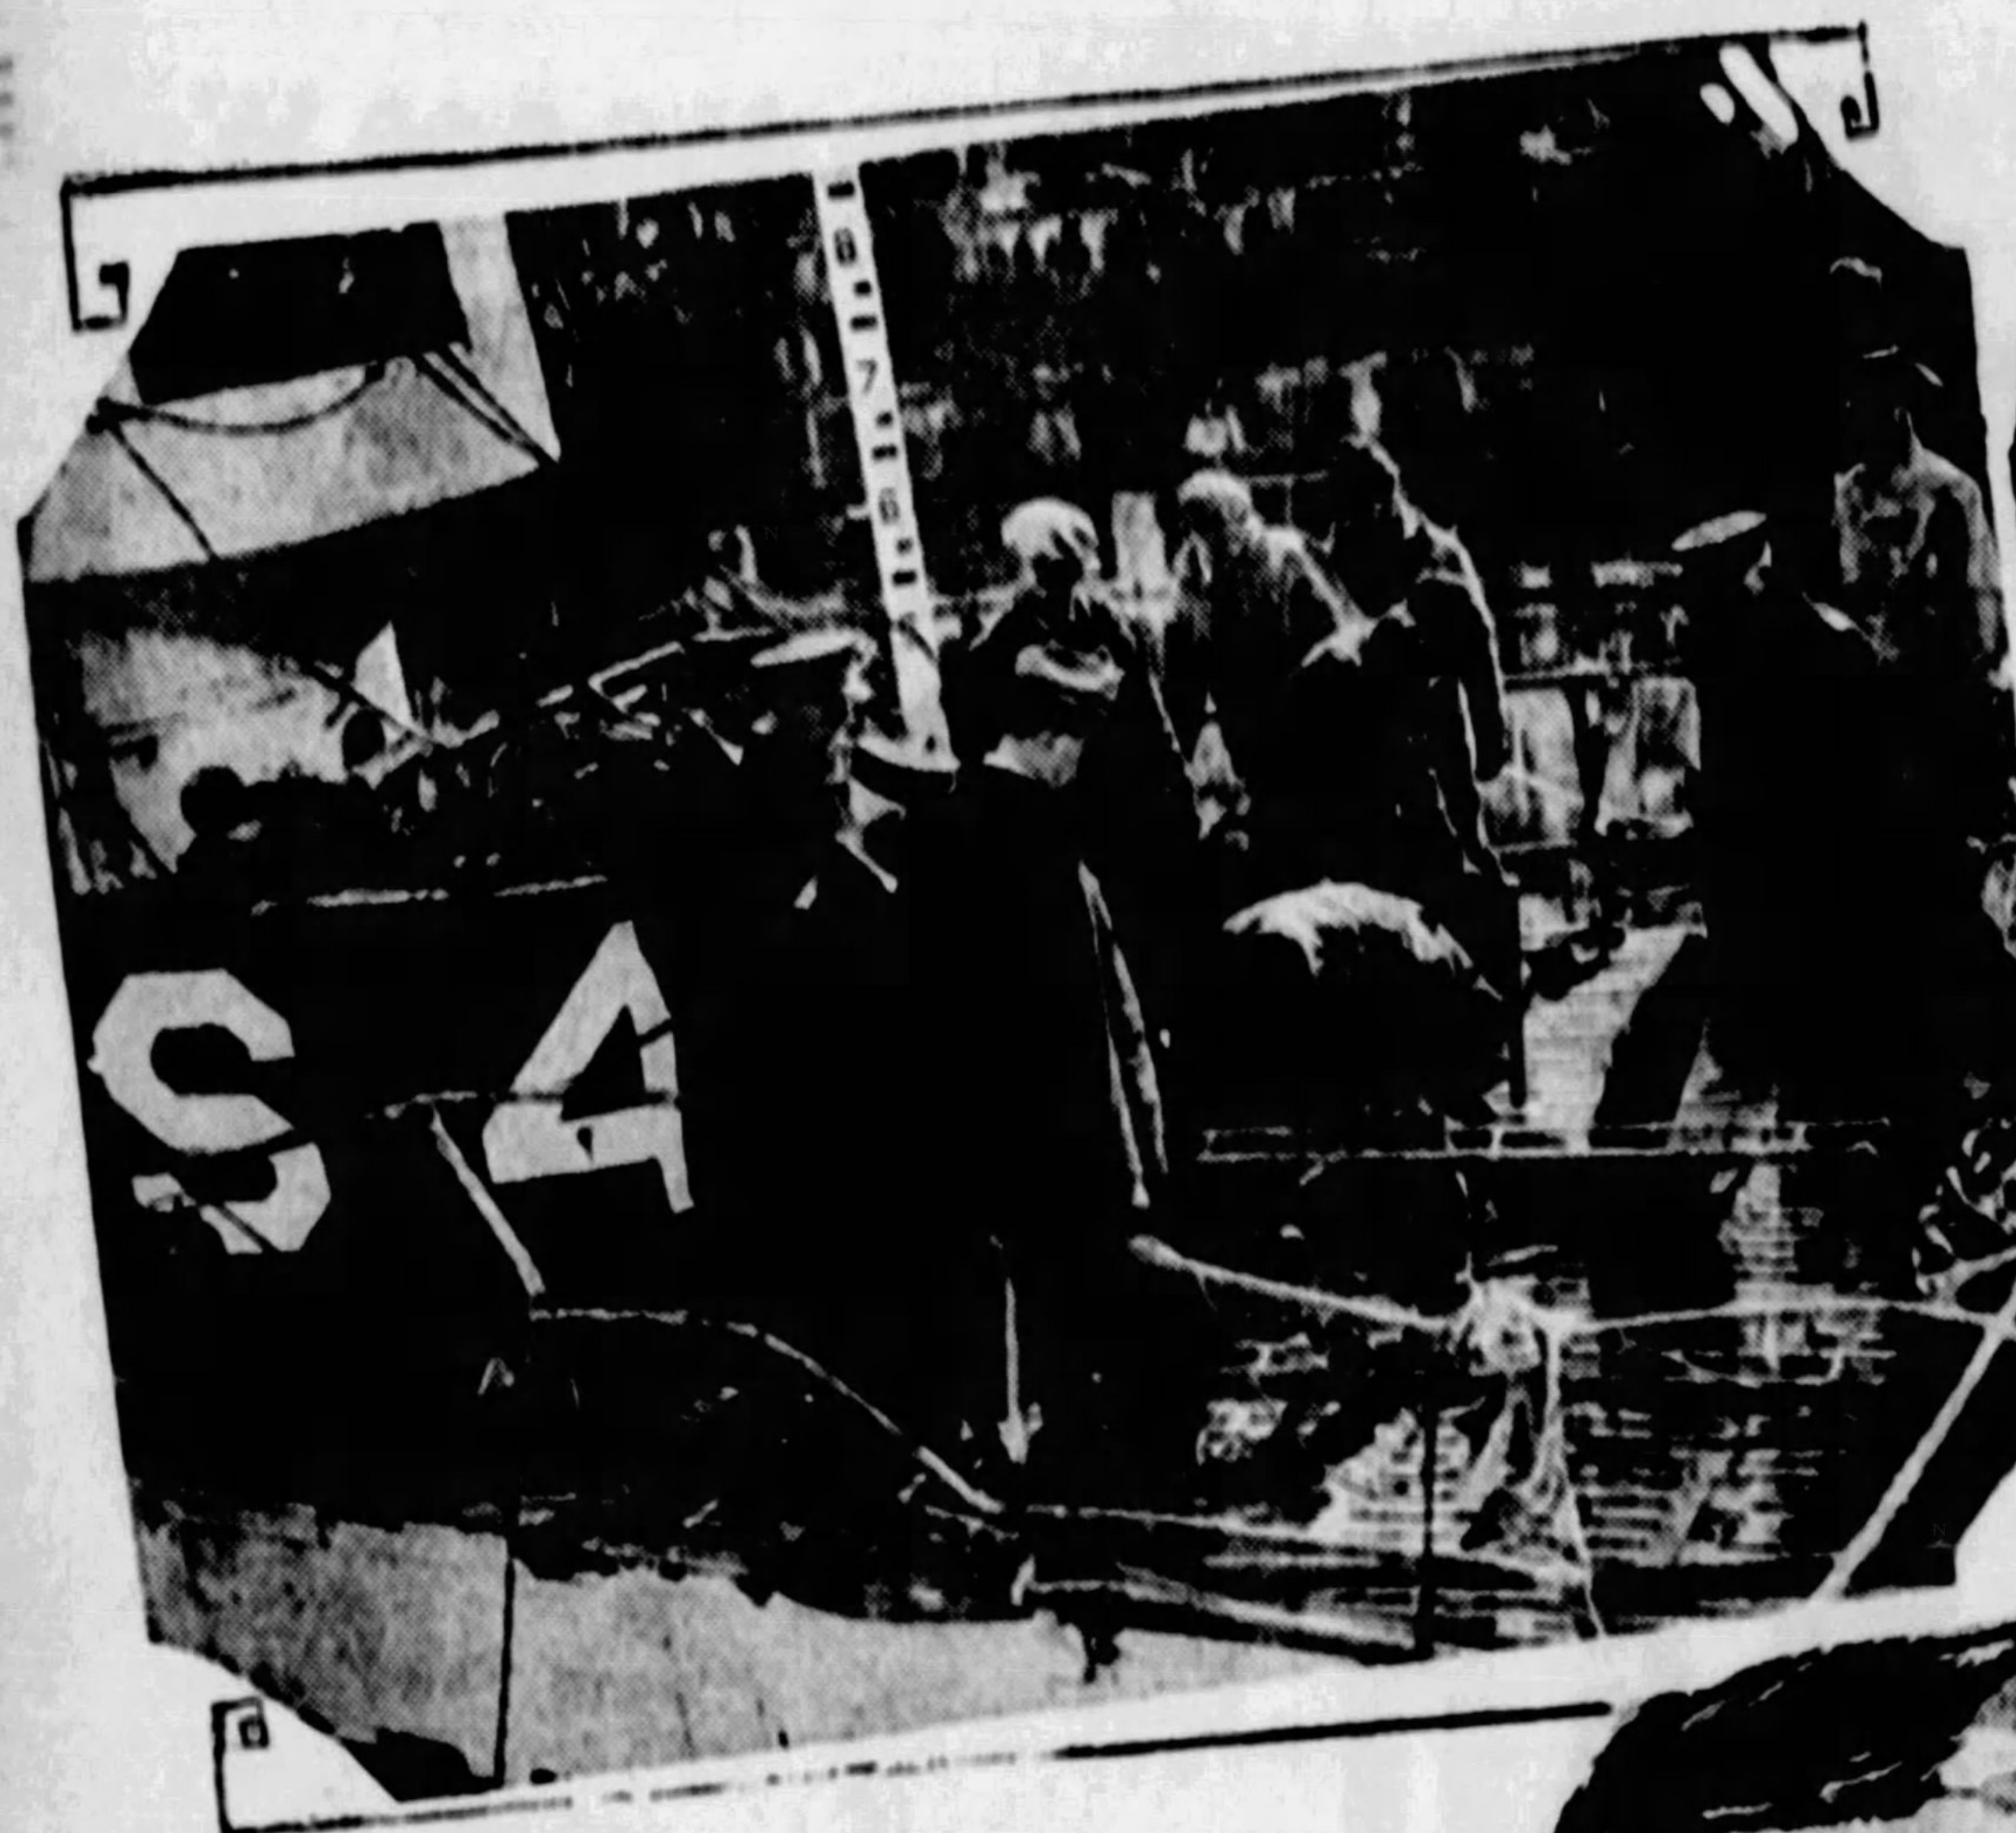
HEARST PAPER MAY SNARE OIL FUGITIVES

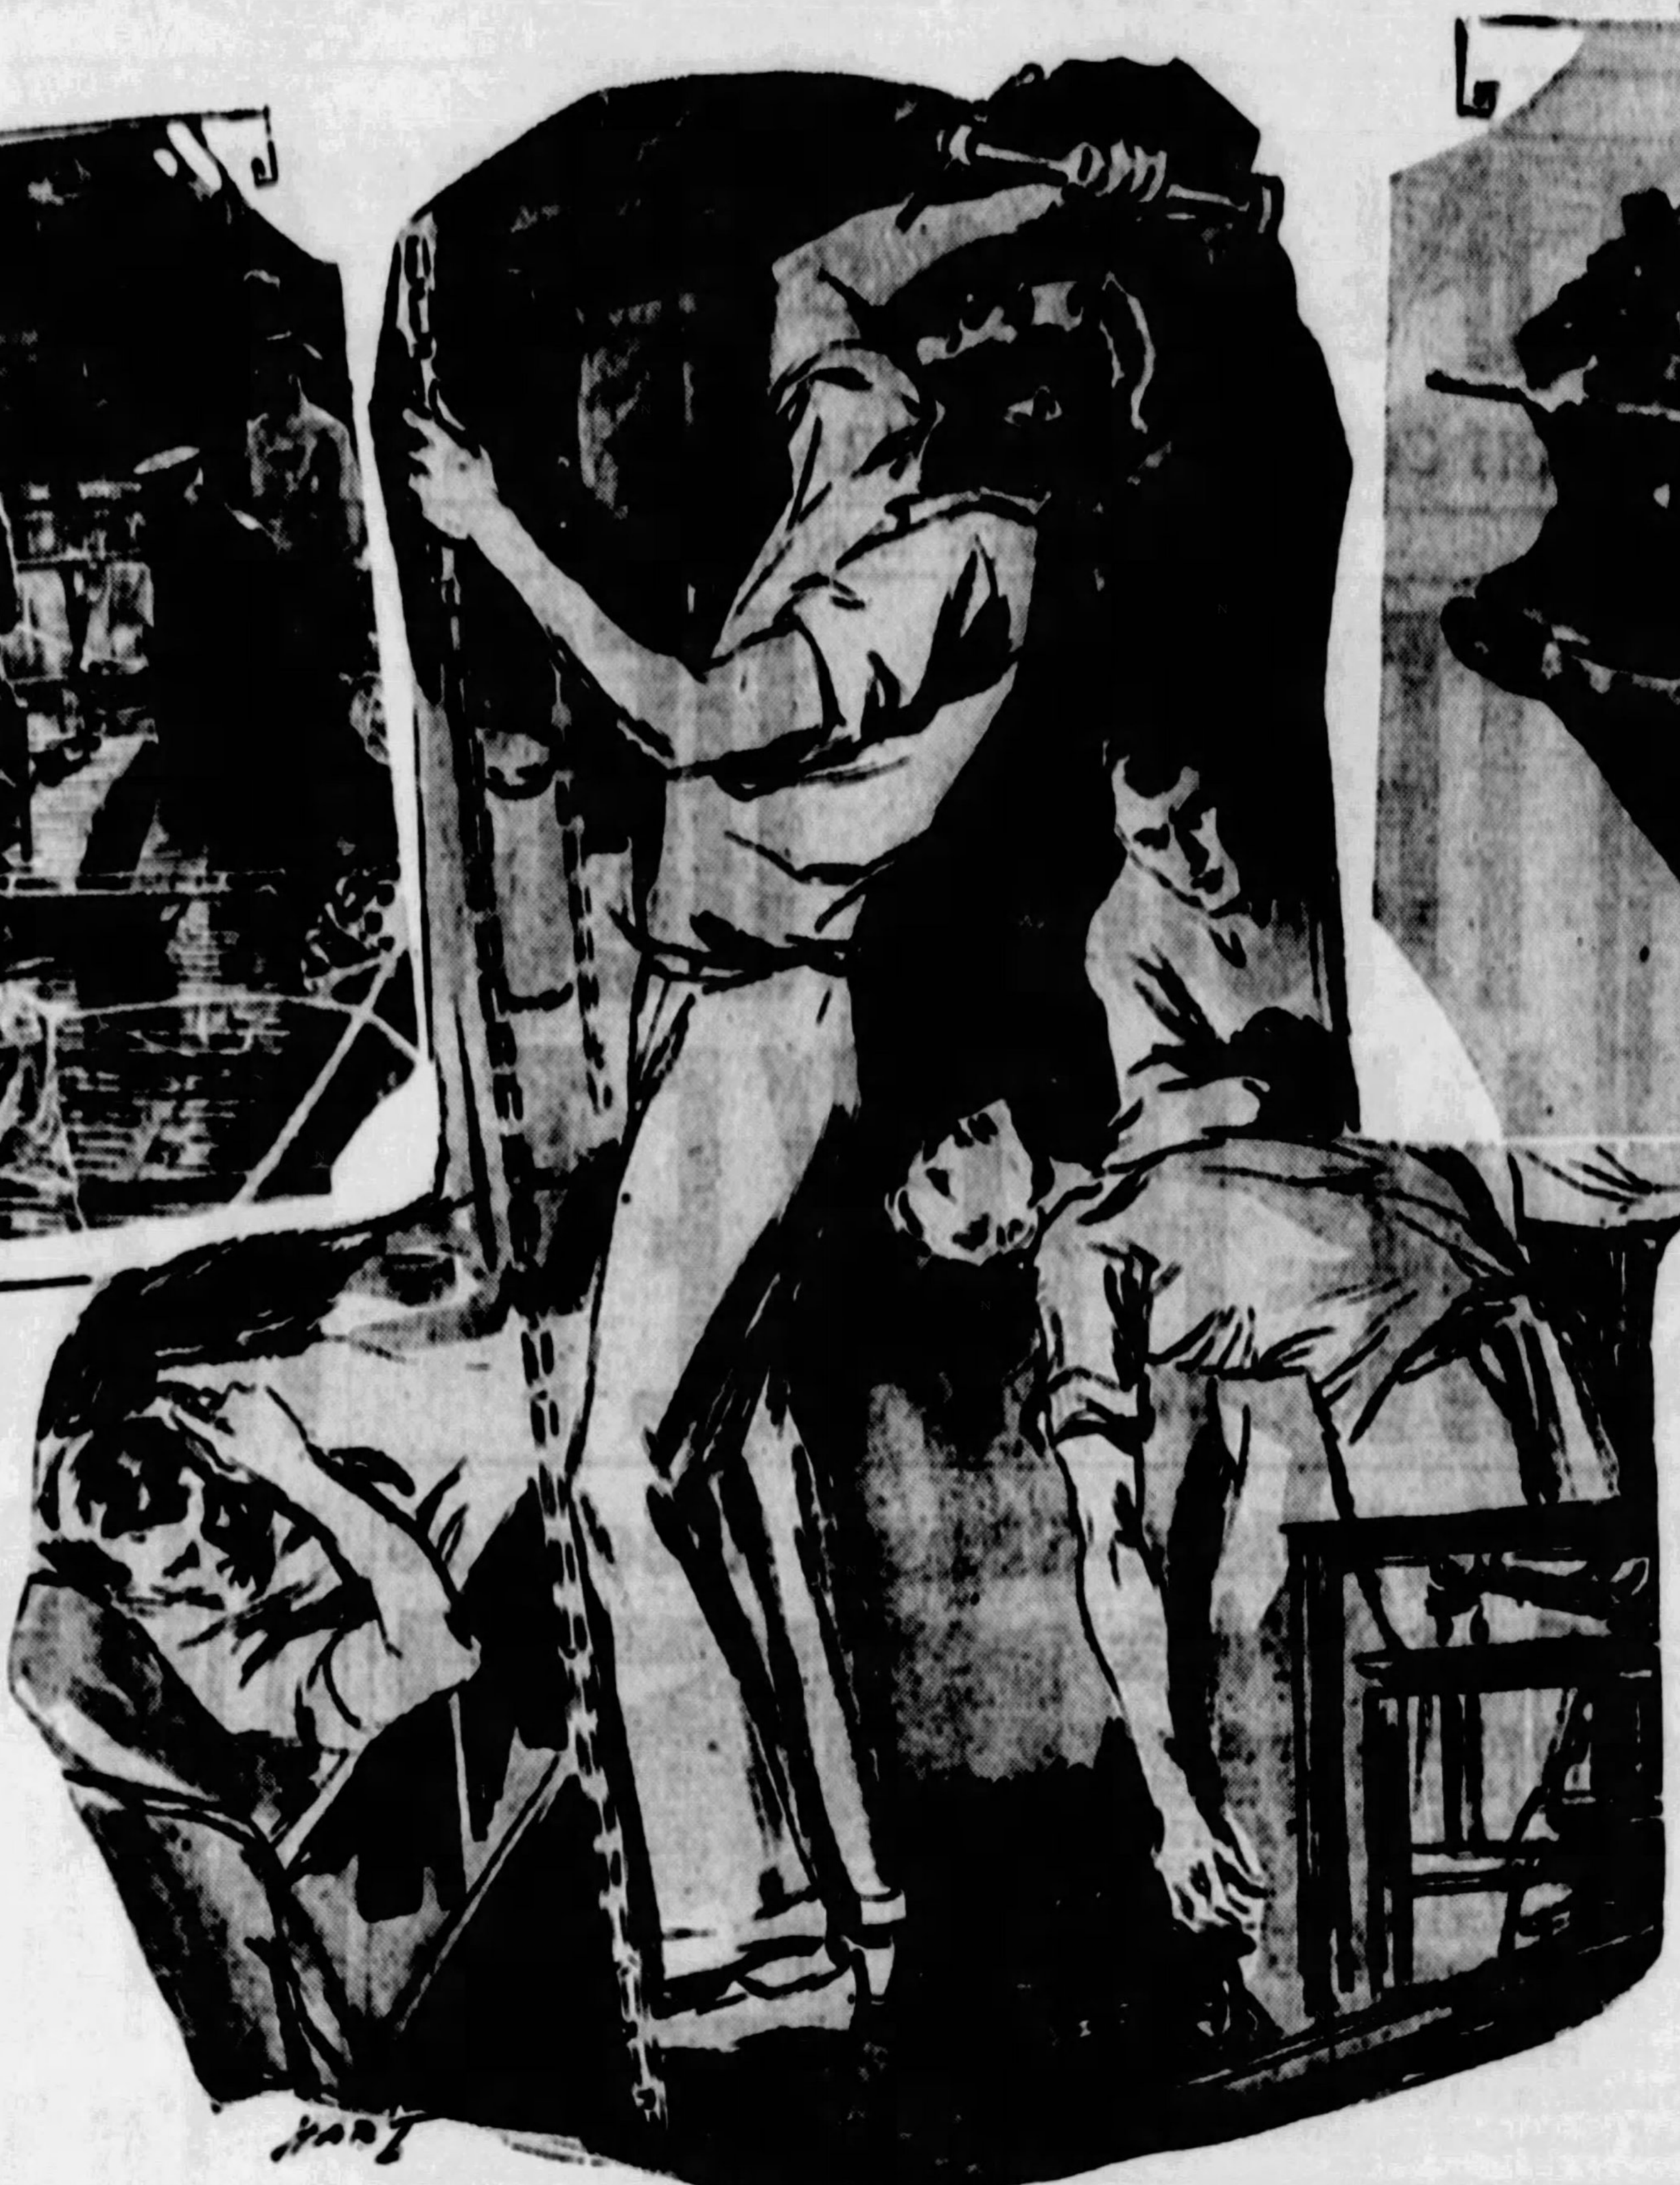
S-4 Tells Fearful Tale

MATE GONE, DORIS IS STEELED TO FATE



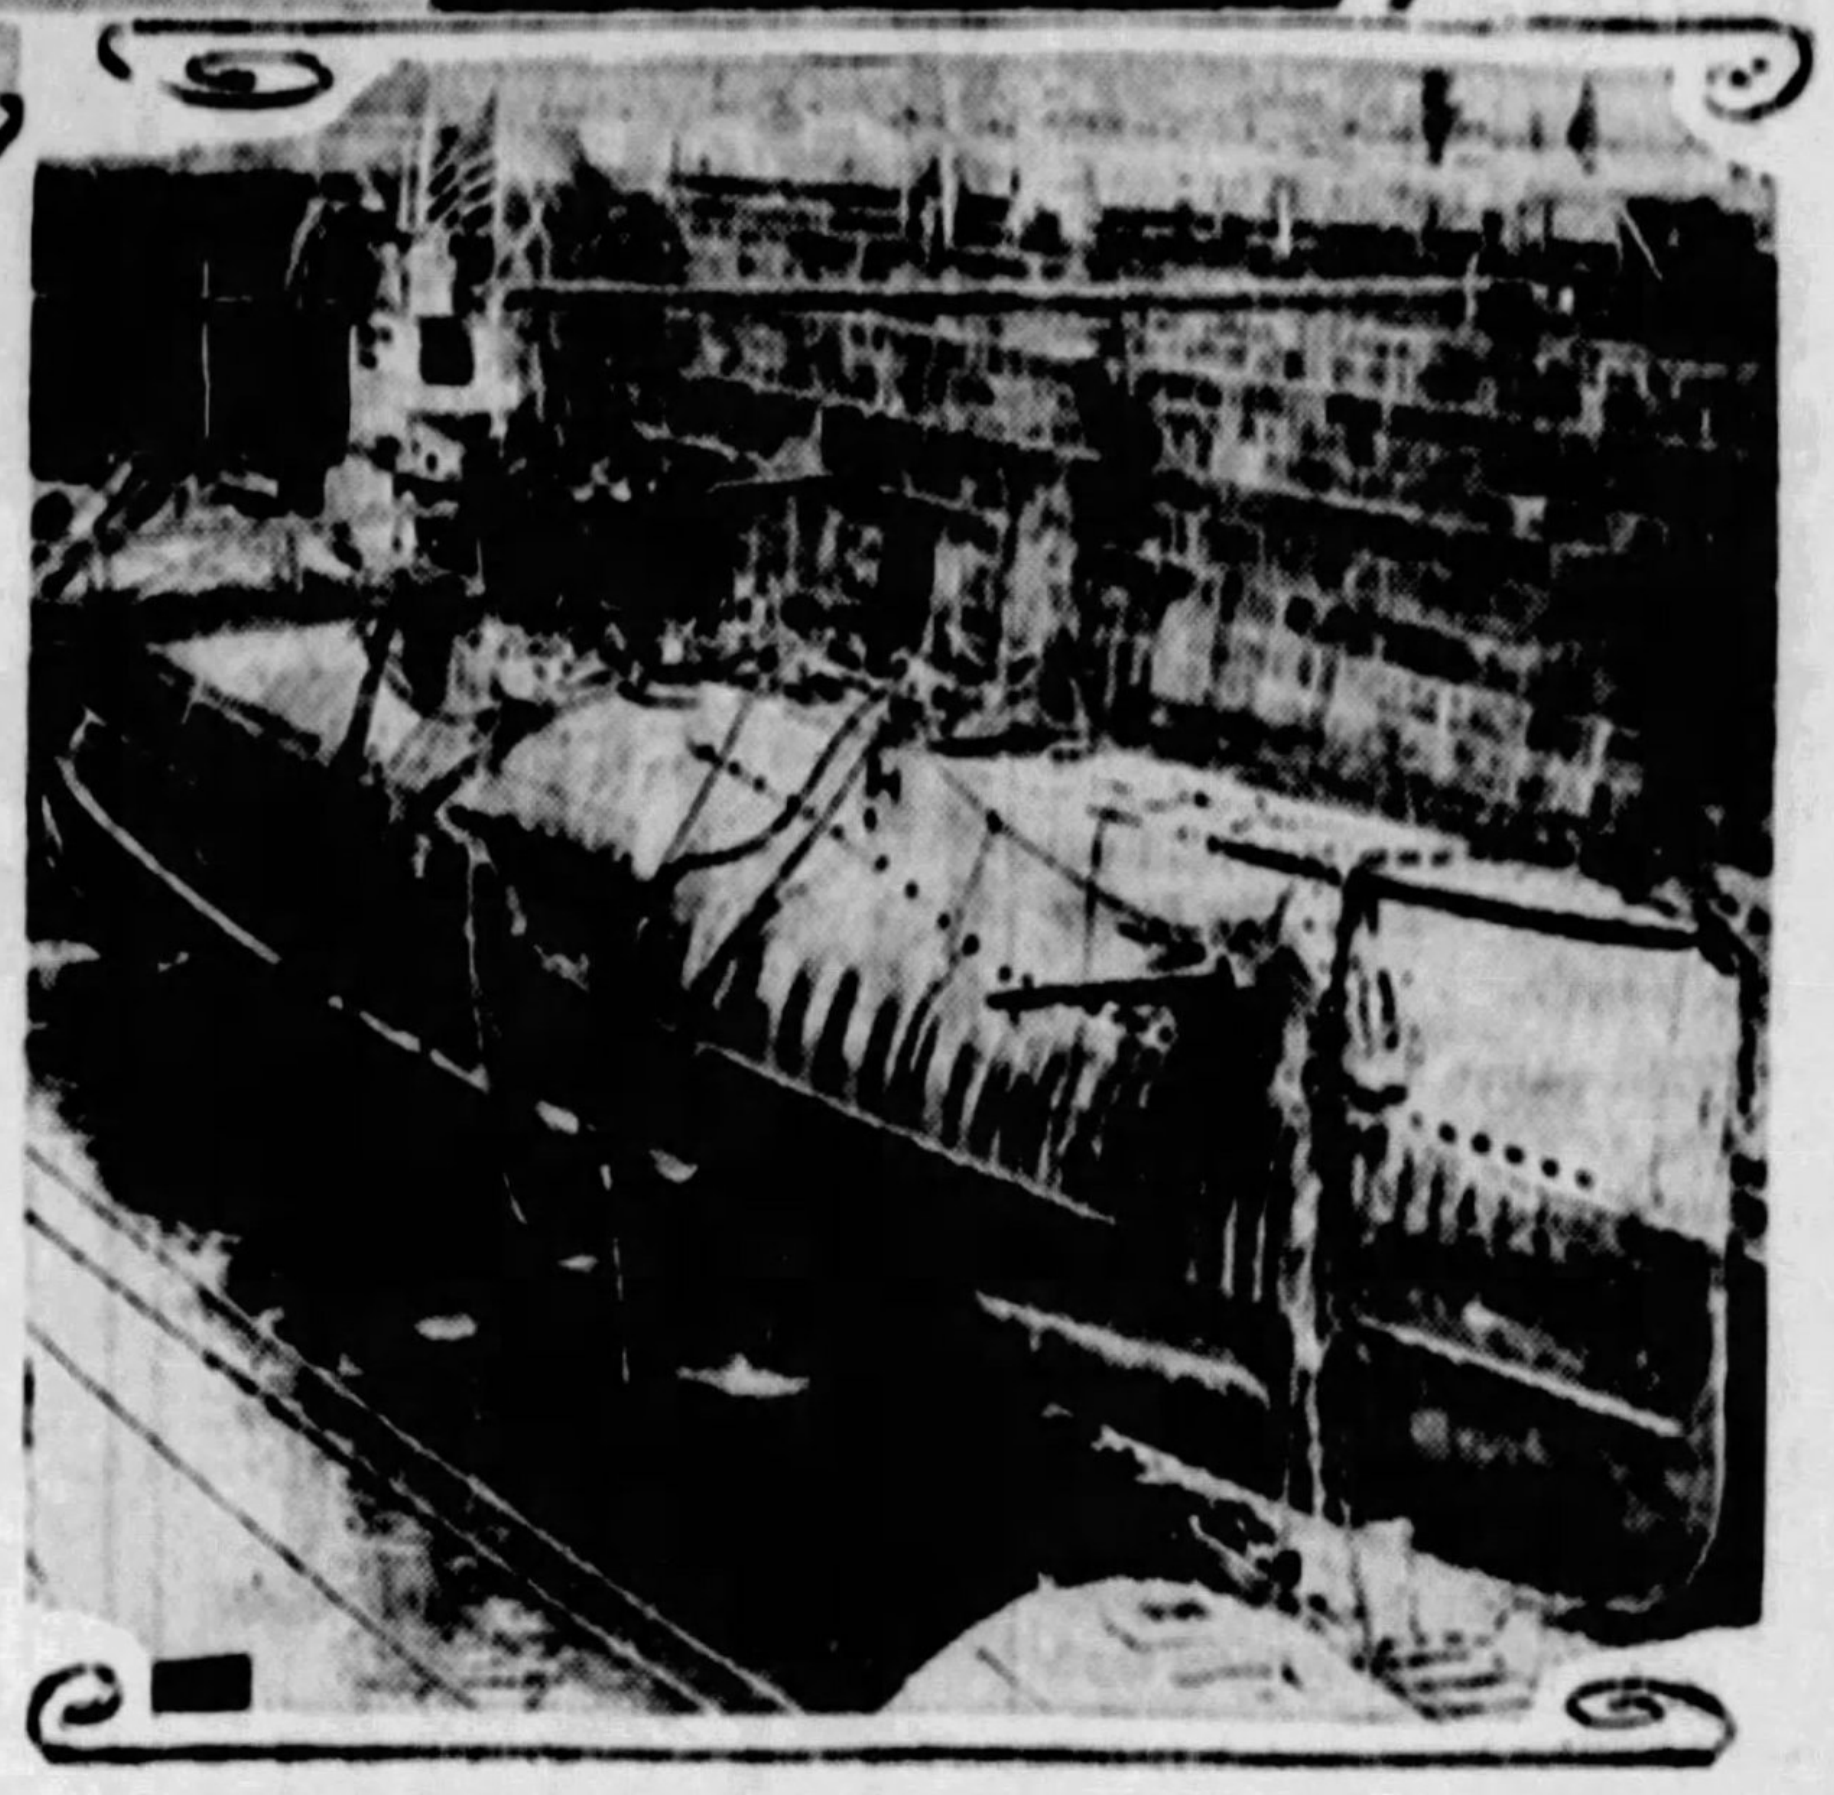
INSPECTED BY WILBUR

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur and Rear Admiral Andrews inspected the S-4, now at Boston, and looked down into its hatchways of death during the official examination.



TAPPED IN VAIN

Investigators have only the gruesome, mute details of the S-4's interior from which to piece out the story of what happened in the long, long hours of imprisonment for members of its crew. Lieut. Graham Fitch, trapped in a small forward room with his men, banged out code signals on the sub's side with a heavy wrench as long as the air lasted and gave him life and strength. To the outside, divers could hear nothing but a faint "tap-tap, tap-tap," but they understood and relayed Fitch's words to a waiting, anxious world.



IN DRYDOCK

The S-4 now rests in drydock at Charlestown Navy Yard, Boston, where naval workers are reclaiming it. Above, Capt. J. D. Wilson exhibits the wrench that told the grim crew's story to divers. The S-4, rammed at Christmas by the destroyer Paulding, has just been raised.

HEARST PAPER'S PLAN MAY RETURN FUGITIVES

By JUDSON C. WELLIVER,
Editor Washington Herald.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—James A. O'Neil and Harry . Blackmer, oil magnates and associates of Harry F. Sin- air in the conspiracy to filch its naval oil reserves from the vernment, are now fairly in sight of the bar of justice, after ars of successfully evading any process that could bring them book.

The government authorities, pur- ng a plan which was first sub- tted to them by William Ran- ph Hearst's Washington Herald, fast perfecting preliminaries to indicting these twain conspirators and bringing them home from their refuge in France by extradition.

Thus for the second time the cooperation of the Washington Herald with the Federal agencies in this famous case is serving those ends of public righteousness for which the Hearst newspapers uniformly stand. For years every effort completely to unravel the mystery of this corruption fund has failed. The $3,080,000 profits of the Continental Trading Company's single "business" transaction, provided means to bribe a cabinet officer, to buy the government's naval oil reserve, to pay off $150,000 of the Republican National Committee's debt. It furnished fortunes to both Blackmer and O'Neil, and precipitated the country into the seething midst of an unprecedented public scandal.

Must Punish Pair

That much is known. But there still remains roundly $1,000,000 of the corruption money to be accounted for before the whole slimy story can be known and justice meted out to all the guilty. The testimony of Blackmer and O'Neil must be had and beyond that an outraged public opinion demands that they be brought to trial, and punishment.

Until a few days ago, every plan for compelling the return of Blackmer and O'Neil, and forcing their testimony, seemed to have failed. Then, the Washington Herald laid before the Senate investigators a plan, already approved by the best legal talent, and now accepted as certain to bring results. In a word, the plan is to have Blackmer and O'Neil indicted for conspiracy to defraud the Prairie Oil Company through the transactions of the Continental Trading Company; and also, for failure to make income tax returns on their shares of profit by this scaly transaction.

Both branches of this program are now being wrought into plans ,of procedure by the proper authorities. Indictment by either method would open the way to bring the men home under extradition process. The Internal Revenue Bureau, ordinarily extremely reticent in such matters, is known to have been investigating its phase of the subject. Senator Walsh of Montana, prosecutor in the Senate's investigation, recently stated this much from the Senate floor. As to the other aspect, indictment for conspiracy to defraud, Senator Norbeck, of the investigating committee, declared that this procedure would, in his judgment, undoubtedly accomplish the long-desired but elusive end. Senator Norris, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, concurred in this view and indicated his purpose to call on the Department of Justice for action on this matter. There remains only for the lawyers to determine which proceeding will be adopted, or whether both.

The essence of this plan lies in the fact, which the Washington Herald clearly brought out, that the statute of limitation ceases to operate in the protection of a criminal from the day he becomes a fugitive from justice. Blackmer and O'Neil have therefore no chance of escape under this statute.

But these are not the only strings to the government's bow. Studying the various possibilities under the plans just outlined, some of the lawyers have been doubtful whether the extradition between France and the United States would compel extradition for either conspiracy or income tax frauds. In the course of their inquiry into this branch of the matter, the government's counsel in oil frapd cases, Owen J. Roberts and former Senator Atlee Pomerene, have found another and possibly still simpler procedure. This is, to indict for embezzlement, as to which there is no doubt about extradition from France. One of Mr. Roberts' legal associates today stated that there seems to be no doubt that an indictment for embezzlement would stand, and that extradition under it would be promptly honored. The indictment would have to be secured on complaint of a stockholder of the Prairie Oil Company, of record at the time of the Continental Trading Company's transaction. He added that there was believed to be little doubt that this process would bring the indictment.

Laud Paper's Work

In extending their assistance to the government to help bring these malefactors home, the Hearst newspapers have been meticulously careful to render service rather than to produce sensations. That was their policy months ago, when they came into possession of information that enabled the government to defeat the gigantii projelt in jury fixing in the trial of former Secretary Fall and Harry F. Sinclair. At that time Messrs. Roberts and Pomerene, and Peyton Gordon, district attorney for the District of Columbia, united in signing this acknowledgment of the Herald's help:

"The Washington Herald did a real civic service by bringing information of this gross irregularity to the government's counsel. It also rendered a real civic service in the dignified manner in which it refrained from publishing the details until they were submitted to the court."

The press of the entire country echoed these approving sentiments. The New York Times, referring editorially to the commendation extended by the government cohnsel to the Washington Herald said:

"The special point of their praise is that the newspapers, which learned by accident as it were, that plans for tampering with the jury were afoot, kept the matter from premature publicity. Gathering all the details that were possible, it turned over all its information to the government's counsel, so that none of it was published until it was laid before the court.

"This was the most dignified as well as effective course to follow. It was not one which all newspapers have adopted, although it was plainly indicated in this case as in the public interest. Not often does the work of the press in aiding the processes of justice receive such recognition as it has in this instance. The result would be not only cause for congratulations in the newspaper world, but also the furnishing of a model for imitation by others."

The story of the Washington Herald's assistance in defeating the conspiracy to fix the Fall-Sinclair jury, has already become a classic of newspaper experience. Soon after the trial of Fall and Sinclair began in Washington last fall, rumors became persistent that big money and a corps of detectives were serving the effort to defeat justice. A concentration of detectives was reported soon after the trial began; but they were scattered among various hotels, and operations were difficult to trace. A little later, becoming bolder, the detective arranged a general headquarters at Wardman Park hotel, where all operators made regular reports.

On the night of October 28, about midnight, a telephone call came to the Herald office, and was taken by Donald K. King. It was from J. Ray Akers, a street car conductor, who said he had a juror talking of how sure Sinclair was to be acquitted, and saying that he, the juror, expected "to get an automobile as long as this block." King went out to the suburban street car barn and met Akers, who told him the entire story, but would not sign a statement.

Withhold "Big Beat"

Returning to the office, King conferred with the managing editor, M. W. Flynn, and they agreed that instead of publishing the sensational story, the information should firse be laid before the government counsel. Accordingly the district attorney's was brought into the situation. The lawyers agreed that the information was of the utmost importance, but asked that it be withheld from publication lest their ends be defeated. This was agreed to, and the Herald staff undertook to provide affidavits from Akers and King.

Akers meantime had become doubtful whether he ought to make the affidavit. The next night, Sunday, while Akers was in the Herald office an assistant district attorney presented himself, and at the crucial moment served him with a subpena as a government witness. Then the whole party—Akers, Flynn, King and the lawyers—jumped into a waiting automobile and were driven to the offices of Messrs. Roberts and Pomerene, government counsel. Another midnight session followed, the government secret service men now participating. Akers repeated his story, and it was agreed to be sufficient to compel a mistrial. Again government counsel begged that there be no publication; this might spoil everything; and again the Herald men promptly agreed. They preferred risking the loss of their great "beat" to jeopardizing the ends of justice.

Swing Into Action

The next day, Monday, things happened fast. The government agents raided the Burns detectives at their headquarters at the Wardman Park Hotel, taking them completely by surprise. Three men were there, and tables, chair, beds, were littered with the precious—and damning—documents in the case; letters, reports of operators, everything. But once more there was the urgency not to make the entire story public; once more, ready agreement. So the next morning the Herald, pursuant to understanding with the government counsel, merely printed the story that when court met that day, matters would be presented to it by the government, based on information furnished by the Herald, which would be certain to put an end to the trial.

The publication was sufficiently astounding. When court opened its atmosphere was electrical. Senator Pomerene rose, addressed the court, submitted the affidavits of King and Akers, and after examining them the court, Justice Siddons presiding, made an order of mistrial and discharged the jury.

That was really the beginning of the last chapter. The later developments are well known; they are leading down, now, close to the time when another trial of the case will begin, though it is doubted whether former Secretary Fall will be physically able to appear as a defendant. But meanwhile, the further assistance of the Herald has opened the way to new procedures by which it is now substantially assured that the long-drawn, tortuous and unprecedented complex will be straightened out and tardy justice done to all concerned.

'HER MAN' GONE, DORIS IS STEELED TO FATE

Universal Service.

MONTREAL, Que., March 24.—Doris McDonald fainted in her prison cell when she received her last message from George McDonald, who was hanged yesterday.

"As soon as they let you go, honey, go right home where you belong. Then play straight. Don't ever live again as you and I lived."

That is the word George sent her just as he mounted the gallows.

PRAISES GALLOWS VICTIM

When she had revived she was told by Sheriff Dominic Crepin that her man had died "game."

"I never met a gamer boy," he said.

She became calmer during the day as she prepared to go to the penitentiary, where she is to spend the rest of her life for the same murder that cost McDonald his.

"Probably it was all for the best," she said tonight in her cell. "We started out wrong and never did anything right. I am heart-broken about George. I thought these last three weeks that I didn't love him any more, but I guess I was wrong. I did love him.

"The hatred I felt when he didn't tell the whole truth is the hatred you feel when some one you love doesn't treat you right, and I believed honey had thrown me down. I know now he didn't. The way he went out this morning proved the kind of man he was.

"I hope they take me to the penitentiary soon," she said. "I want to leave here, though I know I will be there forever unless good behavior will get me off in twenty-five years or so. Twenty-five years is a long time to a girl who will be old and wrinkled at the end of that time. But I will take my medicine."

Hearst Paper Blazed Trail in Oil Probe

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—William Randolph Hearst's Washington Herald published the first expose of the oil scandals on October 13, 1923, warning the nation that the Fall leases imperiled the security of the naval oil reserves.

This was several months before Senator Walsh of Montana on the floor of the Senate brought the story of the fraudulent transactions into the glare of publicity.

The Washington Herald in that first story outlined all of the facts upon which the late Senator Robert M. La Follette based charges of conspiracy, every one of which has been substantiated in the last five years.

REDFERN PLANE CLUE FLOPS

MOBILE, Ala., March 24.—(AP.)—An airplane wheel and tire, found by fishermen off Horn Island in Mississippi Sound and first believed to have been from the monoplane in which Paul Redfern disappeared last summer while attempting a non-stop flight to Brazil, proved today to have been part of an old type plane.

The fishermen picked up the wheel while plying their nets on the Gulf of Mexico side of the island March 21. The wheel, apparently of steel construction, was so salt-eaten that it crumbled in their hands, but today the crew came into port to bring the tire, which was well preserved.

Hasty check with the Stinson Aircraft Corporation in Detroit where Redfern's plane was designed especially for the Brazil flight revealed that the tire was smaller than those used by the company on their huge monoplanes. William A. Mara, secretary of the company, said their monoplanes were equipped with balloon tires, 32x6 inches in size, while the tire brought here was 25x3.85. Specifications from the tire found by the fishermen, he said, indicated that it was once attached to an old type Curtiss Jenny plane.

CAN'T "CRASH" JAIL, FLEES

NOW GETS PLENTY OF AIR

Newton Vassar, Negro dope peddler, who failed to "crash" the Westmoreland County Jail on a Federal commitment yesterday, is now filling his tubercular lungs with the free ozone of Westmoreland county. He took French leave from the office of Warden J. M. Keating in Greensburg while Deputy Marshal John T. Austin was unwinding red tape.

Vassar, known also as Rufus Johnson and "Ten Hite," was sentenced in Federal Court February 1 to serve a year in the Federal prison at Atlanta for peddling dope. In court on Thursday his attorney made the plea that Vassar, who is tubercular, be removed to Westmoreland county, where the jail accommodations were better. A transfer was ordered.

Yesterday Deputy Marshal Austin delivered the prisoner at the Greensburg jail, which refused to accept him. Then Austin sought the county solicitor and after matters were explained, he received orders from the local Federal Court to bring the prisoner to Pittsburgh. When he returned to the jail, Vassar had disappeared.

The prisoner left his overcoat, overshoes and a bundle of clothing in the Greensburg jail.

Warden John McNeil, of the Allegheny county jail, said he has a cell for Vassar, where all the air he breathes will be laundered. It is the only jail in the state which washes the air for its inmates.

Since the session started, Senator Jones (D.) of New Mexico, died and a Republican governor appointed a Republican successor.

Yesterday Senator Ferris (D.) of Michigan, died, and it is expected by party leaders that Gov. Fred W. Green, a Republican, will name a Republican successor.

Three Girls Hurt in Mystery Crash Won't Name Driver

LICENSE PLATES VANISH

Three girls were injured, two seriously, when an automobile in which they were riding sideswiped a pole along the Nadine road, Penn township, early today. Although questioned by police, the girls refused to divulge the name of the man who drove the car. The victims, Edith Napolitana, 17, and her sister Alvera, 19, both of 6489 Frankstown avenue, and Lillian Talara, 19, of 6609 Rowan avenue, are in the Pittsburgh Hospital.

The Talara girl suffered deep cuts on the neck and face and was weak from the loss of blood. Alvera Napolitana suffered a possible fracture of the skull. Both are reported to be in serious conditions. Edith Napolitana was cut and bruised. Police called at the hospital to question the girls and were refused the name of the driver.

A truck driver who brought the girls to the hospital gave police the location of the accident, and upon going to the scene, officers found employes of the Rosedale garage, Penn township, removing the car. The license plates had been taken from the machine by the driver before he ordered the automobile towed in, police say. County detectives also were notified. Two other girls are said to have been in the machine, escaping uninjured.

An enthusiastic audience showered the girl with flowers after she had entertained with a Mozart concerto.

WARN AGAINST BRUSH FIRES

The grave danger involved in starting brush fires, a widespread practice at this season, is pointed out in an announcement by Fire Chief Richard L. Smith. This practice imperils one's own property and that of others, and violates a city ordinance, according to Smith, and the police bureau, having been appealed to for help, has promised to make arrests where necessary. The high winds at this time of year often put these fires beyond control, necessitating the calling out of fire companies that should be on duty to protect homes and business places, Chief Smith pointed out.

"Fedora," Sardou's Play, to Be Final Photoplay Pola Negri Will Star in For Paramount

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 24.

A PERSONAL victory was scored by Pola Negri when Paramount finally agreed to let her film Sardou's famous play, "Fedora." Pola refused flatly to consider anyone of 18 plays sent her for her perusal. She dubbed them amateurish and stood firmly on her two feet, announcing that she would make something good or nothing.

She had the sense to know anything worth while is worth fighting for and she happens to be something more than an exotic beauty. She is a woman of intelligence and, more important, a woman with plenty of spirit.

I hear tell at the studio Pola stood her ground like a general, saying she would rather never make a picture than do a "quickie." B. P. Schulberg was so impressed with her earnestness that he finally agreed to "Fedora."

And, as an added concession, Dr. Ludwig Berger, one of Germany's most eminent directors was assigned to direct her. "Fedora" will be Pola's last for Paramount—and she is doing her best to make it a picture that will always be remembered.

I hadn't an idea that Mrs. Wallace Reid had anything to do with "Hell Ship Bronson." Some way it doesn't sound like her or like a woman but the Gotham people, who are producing it, call it Mrs. Wallace Reid's picture, which probably means she is in charge of the production. Reed Howes has been signed for the juvenile lead by Sam Sax, president of this new company, and Noah Beery has been signed for the part of the heavy. Joseph Henabery will direct. We no longer scorn these thrillers that come from the independent studios. Harry Cohn's "Blood Ship" broke records and now they tell me "The Sporting Age" made at his studio will go into the Million Dollar Theater week after next. This is one of the few long-run Los Angeles houses.

Can it be that Louis B. Mayer is trying to corner the scenario market. It does seem to me I hear of more stories being bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer than any other company in the business. When they are not buying plays they are buying originals. Dorothy Farnum has just sold "The Dark Fire." She sold it and set herself right down with five days' leeway to write the screen adaptation. Her story is a romance laid in the South Sea Islands and there is talk that Ramon Navarro will play the hero.

Charles Ray is apparently undismayed by the unkind thrusts given him on his stage endeavors. Come to think of it, it wasn't his work so much as the involved matter of who was to produce his plays that created all the furore. Now there comes a telegram from Charlie saying that he has gone to Washington to reappear in "Within the Law" at the Poli Theater, and later to Philadelphia. More interesting than Charlie's play dates is the cast which he has chosen to give the play strength. There is pretty little Ruth Shepley, one of Broadway's ingenue favorites; Burton Churchill, May Robson, Dustin Farnum and Fritzi Scheff, headliners every one of them and in their day stars.

Holt Still Under Columbia's Banner

Because of wide publicity given to the report that Jack Holt has returned to the Famous Players lot, Columbia Pictures issues a statement that the star is still under contract to them, and will appear in several of the company's productions next season. His absence from the home lot is not an indication that he has broken his contract with Columbia. Holt's temporary sojourn at Paramount was made possible through the courtesy of Columbia, which granted the star an extension of contract to enable him to appear in two Paramount releases. Upon their completion he will return to Columbia, where his first appearance will be in a special production scheduled for next season's program.

Southern

Miss Howell plays a Southern belle in "My Maryland," returning Monday to the Alvin, where it played four weeks in November.

"Sadie Thompson" Is Name for Race Horse

A sportsman's willingness to play a hunch in the naming of a race horse promises to place the name of "Sadie Thompson," Gloria Swanson's latest picture, very much in the sports limelight during the coming turf season.

For Col. Phil T. Chinn, one of the best known breeders of race horses in the United States and former owner of Sarazen, has announced his intention of giving the name "Sadie Thompson" to the most promising two-year-old in his stable.

The hunch came to Col. Chinn while he was visiting Los Angeles, during the showing of Miss Swanson's second independently produced United Artists picture at the United Artists Theater.

"That certainly is a fast moving photoplay," said the Colonel. "And I have an idea 'Sadie Thompson' would be a winner on the turf. I'm going to give the name to the fastest horse among the hundred I have in training now at Lexington, Ky. It isn't often I have such strong hunches, but when I get 'em, I play 'em. Watch for 'Sadie' at Belmont Park and Saratoga."

THEATER BILLS NEXT WEEK

Sam Benelli is conductor, and Ulisse Matthei, organist of Turin Cathedral, accompanies the Florentine Singers who will appear as the stage attraction in the Stanley Theater next week. George Bancroft will be on the screen in "The Showdown."

Helen Hunt Jackson's novel, "Ramona," in film form will be seen in Loew's Penn next week. It stars Dolores Del Rio, with Warner Baxter and Roland Drew in the cast. "Hula Blues" is the stage show.

Jack Holt stars in "The Warning," a melodrama which will be seen in Loew's Aldine next week. Five acts of vaudeville also are on the bill.

Peggy Mayo, one of the principals in "Pretty Babies," coming next week to the Academy, sings a number of new "blues" songs.

"The Corner Drug Store," a musical farce will top the vaudeville in the Harris next week. On the screen will be Patsy Ruth Miller in "Red Riders of Canada."

Charlie Chaplin has a new leading woman in "The Circus," coming to the Grand next week. She is Merna Kennedy, who has not previously appeared in any motion picture.

Billy Arlington and Company, are included in the vaudeville in the Sheridan Square next week. The two screen features will be Olive Borden in "Come to My House" and Irene Rich in "Powder My Back."

Appearing in "The Leopard Lady," coming to the Olympic screen next week, Jacqueline Logan is the leader of an animal act.

SHIPP ON BOARD OF Y. M. C. A.

Federick B. Shipp, who since January, 1916, has filled the position of general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Pittsburgh, yesterday was elected a member of the board of directors of the association and appointed chairman of the committee on buildings and endowment funds. He also was elected a member of the board of trustees of the association and was made treasurer of that body. On May 1, he will, at his own request, be allowed to retire as general secretary of the Pittsburgh Association, and will be succeeded by John E. Manley, of New York.

During the twelve years of Mr. Shipp's service with the Pittsburgh Association the membership has increased from about 600 to nearly 15,000. Last year, in addition to its regular social, educational, physical and religious work with young men, the Pittsburgh Association enrolled 7673 boys in its character building programs.

PLAN DRIVE ON AUTO OIL FRAUD

Offenders who have been substituting inferior automobile oils for the better grades have been warned by District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner that repetition of the offense, declared to be widespread, will bring prosecutions. An act of the Legislature of 1927 provides fines for its violation.

"I do not intend at this time to prosecute you, but in selling oils of a grade other than that asked for, you have violated the law of Pennsylvania. I warn you that I will see that the law is enforced and that the public gets what is represented to it at the time of sale," warns Mr. Gardner.

The action was prompted by evidence showing wide-spread illegal substitution presented by Frank S. Douglass, Jr., chief of the department of investigation of the American Fair Trade Association, and J. D. S. Truxall, attorney for the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh. Both assured the district attorney that evidence will be submitted to him when such violations appear.

A fine of $200 to $500 is provided for the first offense and for the second offense a fine of $500 to $2,000 and a jail sentence of 60 days to one year.

SCOUT SUICIDE THEORY OF PAIR

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 24.—George Henning, brother of William and Matilda Henning, who died in a Detroit rooming house Wednesday night, left for Detroit yesterday to arrange for the disposition of the bodies.

Late Thursday afternoon George Henning wired his sister, Freda Henning, in Detroit, and found that Matilda Henning worked in the home of a Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Pool, Pittsburgh, and had opened a savings account in a bank there. Her visit here was apparently to sign some deeds in settlement of an estate of her parents. She had promised to return to Pittsburgh and left some of her personal belongings in the Pool home.

WENT TO DETROIT

The 19-year-old youth and his 22-year-old sister went to Detroit on March 12 in search of employment. They had written a sister, Freda, employed there in Providence Hospital as a maid.

"I don't believe they committed suicide, but I can't understand why they didn't get in touch with me when they arrived in Detroit." Freda told the police.

The theory that the boy and girl died in a suicide pact was discounted by Deputy Coroner Berg. A teakettle on the open burner of a gas stove is believed to have boiled over and put out the flame.

The Hennings kept to themselves after renting the room. The day before the fatal accident they did not leave their room all day.

POLICE HEAD HERE

ganizer for the United Mine Workers, was in charge of the pickets.

"KEEP MOVING"

A. D. Kdsall, chief deputy at the Maude mine, kept the pickets on the move until the arrival of Sergt. Jones and his detail about 6 o'clock, and then the troopers took charge. Sergt. Jones requested Caddy to take the women off the picket line and Caddy complied readily.

"All we ask is that we are allowed to picket this mine peacefully. We do not want trouble and will go a long way to avoid it," Caddy told Jones.

"All right, keep your men on the move and make them keep in two's," ordered Jones.

Sheriff Braun was expected to visit the mine this morning, but his conference with Maj. Lynn G. Adams, commander of Pennsylvania state police, last night interfered with his plans. Adams spent several hours with the sheriff last night, discussing the Traveskyn trouble and other matters pertaining to the strike.

The sheriff and Maj. Adams called on Fagan at his home in Brookline about 10 o'clock last night.

CALL ON FAGAN

Maj. Adams inquired about a letter Fagan sent to Gov. John S. Fisher recently concerning the state police. He instructed the miners' leader to desist from mass picketing and told him the troopers would be given strict orders to enforce the sheriff' proclamation to the letter. Fagan inquired as to how the proclamation would be enforced and asked if the wholesale arrest of pickets would continue, but Maj. Adams declined to answer this.

Maj. Adams returned to Harrisburg this morning, it was announced.

Fagan was released from the county jail yesterday afternoon under $500 bail after a hearing before Justice of the Peace A. W. McMillen of Carnegie. His father, Thomas Fagan, 67, of Treveskyn, and a brother, John, are still in jail with 62 other union pickets arrested at the Maude mine of the McClane Mining Company at Treveskyn yesterday morning and Thursday. The pickets declare they inter to test the legality of Sheriff Braun's proclamation against unlawful assembly in strike zones.

PICKETS STAND PAT

While Fagan's hearing was in progress, more than 200 men and women gathered in the vicinity of the Maude mine where Fagan and the other pickets were arrested yesterday morning and Thursday. Several details of state police under Sgt. Jones were on hand and the pickets were ordered to disperse, but they declined to leave. They walked in pairs, back and forth along the road in front of the McClane Mining Company property and no arrest was made. The troopers kept them on the move and refused to allow more than two persons to be together at one time. The pickets began gathering about 3:30 p. m. and most of them remained until nearly 5 o'clock. They were orderly and unusually quiet.

Occasionally, someone would call out:

"Strike on, men! Come with us and join the union!"

WOMEN AID PICKETS

Perhaps it would be a woman's voice, pitched high with suppressed excitement: "Join the union, men. Don't work for starvation wages!"

The troopers paid no heed to their calls, nor to the pickets who obeyed their orders. Now and then, a crisp order would be heard where one of the pickets stopped for a moment to chat with a couple of his fellow strikers.

"Break it up and keep moving," was the usual command from the troopers.

RUM RUNNERS GIVEN 3 MONTHS IN JAIL

Henry Chisholm, West Virginia Negro, was sentenced to serve three months in the Allegheny County workhouse when he pleaded guilty before Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Criminal Court to charges of possession and transporting liquor in the mining camps of Blyesdale. Chisholm, who said he had been in Allegheny county for eight months, testified he was bootlegging to obtain money to pay his fare back to West Virginia.

Mussolini Invades Realm of Poetry

ROME, March 24.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini revealed himself as a free verse poet in a proclamation just issued in behalf of the national bread days, April 14 and 15. The following message from Il Duce will be posted throughout the country and printed on cards, which will be sold:

"Italians! Love bread, heart of the home, savour of the repast, joy of health!

"Respect bread, sweat of the brow, pride of labor, poem of sacrifice!

"Honor bread, glory of the fields, fragrance of the earth, feast of life!

"Do not waste bread, richness of the fatherland, sweetest gift of God, most holy reward of human toil.

OIL MAN MAPS MINE RELIEF

abrogation of the contract was interesting. Schwab dodged questions as a fox might elude the hounds. He told stories, cracked jokes, and asked questions himself, once or twice he was nearly cornered by Oliver K. Eaton, counsel for the United Mine Workers, a dogged and determined questioner, who refused to be shaken off; then Schwab, to carry the figure further, showed his teeth, held his pursuer at bay for a moment, and soon, laughing again, was off on another angle, but he denied he broke the contract.

Rockefeller met the issue squarely. He said that in abandoning the wage agreement entered into with the United Mine Workers and making a new one with its employes the Consolidation Coal Company had broken no contract, because its workers were interested parties and had consented to the change. The contract, as Rockefeller put it, was merely modified by mutual consent. The United Mine Workers, of course, do not admit this; but when Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana suggested as much Rockefeller bade him get the company's version of the matter before arriving at a conclusion. Rockefeller made a favorable impression by his dignity, his earnestness and his appearance of sincerity.

Mellon Seeks Cover.

Mellon took refuge from the questions as to the breaking of the wage contract by the Pittsburgh Coal Company behind the oft-repeated assertion that he was not in its operating department and had no personal knowledge of the points involved in the matter.

Schwab's solution for the ills of the coal industry was to put the surplus miners in some other kind of work.

Rockefeller proposed that the Senate committee meet with representatives of the operators and tackle, first, the fundamental problem of over-production; that they next take up with the railroads the matter of transportation and freight rates; that the question of distribution and markets be dealt with next at a conference with the large distributors, and that finally the representatives of the miners be called in, and consideration given to "the largest, and most important, and most difficult of all the problems—that of labor and wages."

When R. B. Mellon took the stand Oliver K. Eaton first questioned him about his holdings of stock in the Pittsburgh Coal Company. He said he owned about 80,000 shares of both common and preferred, or about 11 per cent of the total, and that his brother, Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, owned about the same amount.

Between them, he said, in answer to questions, they bought 78,398 shares of treasury stock of the Pittsburgh Coal Company at $35 a share. Eaton remarked that as the book value of the stock was about $300 a share, the sale at $35 represented a sacrifice by the company of many millions of dollars. He asked Mellon if the stock had been sold to raise money with which to put the company on an open shop basis.

"The money ran out before we got to the open shop," answered Mellon.

Eaton asked questions about the Jacksonville agreement, which was signed by the Pittsburgh Coal Company when Mellon was chairman of the board. Mellon admitted that the company paid the Jacksonville scale of wages until it began losing too much money, then closed its mines entirely, and some months later, but before the expiration of the Jacksonville agreement, reopened them on a lower wage scale. Mellon said all the directors approved of the action taken.

"The company is running along peacefully now on an open shop basis," he said.

Senator Wheeler wanted to know if Mellon was interested in the human side of the coal business, or was interested only in drawing dividends.

Not Drawing Dividends.

The witness answered with a smile that he was not drawing any dividends at the present time from the coal business. He said, however, in answer to Wheeler's questions, that he was interested in the welfare of the company's employes, and that the company had spent $1,250,000 recently in the improvement of its mine villages.

Wheeler wanted to know if he was not interested in politics—if he was not Republican State Chairman in Pennsylvania.

"That's another Mellon," was the answer. "There are nine Mellons, without counting the women."

"A whole carload of melons," remarked Senator Watson.

Eaton questioned Mellon about the employment of E. S. McCullough by the Pittsburgh Coal Company, through the Chamber of Commerce, in a campaign for the destruction of the United Mine Workers in the Pittsburgh district. Mellon said that he had never heard of the matter until he read about it in the newspapers.

Declines to Answer.

Eaton asked him if he believed in collective bargaining, and he answered: "I won't go into that, because I don't understand anything about it."

"Shouldn't an employer keep his word to an employe?"

"I'm not familiar with that matter."

Don Rose, attorney for the Pittsburgh Coal Company, rose at this point and said that Mellon had not read the Jacksonville agreement and it was not fair to question him about it.

"Has the Pittsburgh Coal Company made any money since the new policy was put into effect?" the witness was asked.

"Very little," he said.

He was asked if he was not a stockholder in the Pennsylvania Railroad and admitted he held "a few hundred shares." He returned a negative to the question if he had ever discussed labor problems with Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania.

The examination turned to the destitution of the strikers, and Mellon said he thought they were being well taken care of by charitable organizations. He said that Augustus K. Oliver was at the head of one of the relief organizations, and that there were others, also.

MORE PAROLES IN 1927

The eighteenth annual report of the Criminal Court probation office, filed yesterday with Judge Joseph M. Swearingen by Chief Probation Officer Charles H. Austin, shows an increase of 77 cases over the number for 1926. The 1927 total was 1,047.

The office handled 845 cases for supervision, and 111 cases involving collection of fines and costs. January was the busiest month, July the least busy. In the report are letters from offenders grateful for help. One wished "luck to men of your type who help fellows and give them a chance." Another thanked the judge who paroled him and the jail physician who cured him of the dope habit. This man wrote:

"They say a dope fiend can never be cured. Well, here is one who was."

BLIND WOMAN, DESERTED, FILES DIVORCE PETITION

Mrs. Martha Bates Zahlhaus, 129 Dewey street, Etna, who is blind, was deserted 12 years ago by her husband, Anthony Zahlhaus, she told Judge John A. Evans yesterday in Divorce Court. "He disappeared as though the earth had swallowed him," she said. Zahlhaus drank to excess, according to the wife, who is represented by Attorney J. Warren Hunter.

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Comings and Goings of Sewickley Valley Folk

THERE is quite a "parcel" of news today about the comings and goings of Sewickley Valley folks, most of whom seem to have been on the move during the last couple of months. The Princeton junior prom has drawn one of the Valley matrons east, Mrs. Ralph W. Harbison, of Pine road, having left on Thursday for the New Jersey university. She will be one of the chaperons at the dance. Mrs. Harbison's eldest son, Harris, is a senior at Princeton, and I understand that he will have Nancy Miller, daughter of the William Booth Millers, of Pine road, as his guest at the prom. Nancy, you know, is a student at Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. James Crossan Chaplin III, of Glen Osborne, also went east on Thursday, I hear. They went to Boston, where they will visit Mrs. Chaplin's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Brown, Jr. Mr. Chaplin expects to come back to Sewickley early in the week, but his wife will remain for about 10 days.

Among other Sewickleyans in the East are the William Pomeroys and their son, William, Jr. They left yesterday for Atlantic City, and, while Mr. Pomeroy will return to the Valley the first of the week, his wife and son will stay for a fortnight. Mrs. Edward B. Raymond, of Beaver street, also is away. She left early in the week for Clifton Springs, N. Y. Several, too, have returned from New York. Mrs. Nelson R. Van Kleeck, of Thorn street, got back Tuesday after being in Gotham for a week, and Miss Dorothy Liggett, of Frederick avenue, arrived home from New York on Monday.

There is to be a buffet luncheon given Monday for Mrs. Nellie B. Allen, of New York, who is to address the Sewickley Valley Woman's Club later in the afternoon. Mrs. James Lyal Stuart, of Cochran street, will be hostess at the affair, which will be held in the Allegheny Country Club.

The Easter vacation has begun in most schools, and a number of the young people of the Valley have already arrived home. Among the Hill School boys who have come back are Walter Tabor Grange, Jr., son of the Walter T. Granges, of Shields; William S. Simpson, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Simpson, and Frank W. Jarvis, Jr., son of the Frank W. Jarvises, of Linden place. Frank has had as his guests Dustin Gramia, of Chicago, and Frederick Mechenie, of New York, both students at Hill. His sister, Dorothy, who is a student at Dobbs Ferry, will be home on Thursday.

From the Science Hill School at Shelbyville, Ky., have come Barbara Heumann, daughter of the E. M. Heumanns, of Glen Osborne; Elizabeth Emery, daughter of the John A. Emerys, of Edgeworth, and Mary Louise Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neville C. Davidson, of Pola place. And Caroline Crittenden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Crittenden, is expected home today from Miss Spence's School in New York.

This spring's fashion revue which the Woman's City Club is to give next Friday and Saturday in the William Penn Hotel has taken on the aspect of a real social affair—and is something which the most conscientious observer of Lent may attend without compunction. It will really be a little more than a fashion show, with its special features and its tables where ices and coffee will be served.

The first show will be held at 8 o'clock Friday night, and that afternoon the young society women who will serve as models will hold their dress rehearsal. Several small dinners have been planned for that night, and one of them will be given by Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock and Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl, president of the club, for the models. The show will be repeated on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and at 4 o'clock.

Many of Pittsburgh's most exclusive shops will display their spring fashions at the show, which will be much like a vaudeville program. After the girls have shown their costumes on the stage and runway, they are going to circulate among the tables so that the guests may have a closer view of the frocks and hats.

A theatrical celebrity who is also a member of the British nobility, Lady Peel, was guest of honor at a tea which Mrs. John A. McCook, of Northumberland avenue, gave at her home Thursday afternoon. Lady Peel, otherwise Beatrice Lillie, is appearing at a local theater this week, and sharing honors with her at the tea were two of her company, Pauline Mason and Clifton Webb.

Among the Pittsburghers who are in New York are Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Drake and their daughters, Ruth and Virginia.

Mrs. George L. Alston, of Birdsboro, Pa., who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Wiley, of Watson boulevard, North Side, gave a luncheon this afternoon in McCreery's in honor of her sister, Miss Jean E. Wiley. Miss Wiley's marriage to Dr. J. DeWitt Baker, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Baker, of Woodlawn, will be solemnized in June.

Mrs. A. A. Frauenheim and Mrs. J. M. O'Donnell have been appointed chairmen of tables for the bridge-tea to be held Easter Monday afternoon, April 9, by St. Xavier's Academy Alumnae Association, in the Hotel Schenley. Miss Mary A. Marlier is chairman of reservations; Mrs. Lyman C. Feeney, tea; Mrs. John N. Wolfe and Miss Marie A. Herman, prizes; Mrs. Charles A. Freyvogel and Mrs. Frank D. Murta, reception; and Miss Helen E. Donahoe, publicity.

Girls of the sophomore classes of the Margaret Morrison Carnegie College and the College of Fine Arts will give a dinner tonight in the Hotel Schenley under the chairmanship of Miss Isobel Sheppard. The sophomore social committees of both schools are working with Miss Sheppard, including Miss Louise Binford, Miss Margaret Keenoy, Miss Cora Lee Henk, Miss Virginia Kerr and Miss Virginia Morgan.

Mrs. Jean R. Shields, worthy matron of Dorcas Chapter, No. 401, O. E. S., has appointed Mrs. Louise Smith as general chairman, and Mrs. Elizabeth Boyd, chairman of prizes, for the card party to be held Monday afternoon in Oppenheim-Collins' auditorium. The chapter will hold its installation of officers Thursday night in the Congress Clubhouse, and it will be preceded by a banquet.

Proceeds from the bridge party to be held April 14 by the Pittsburgh Branch of the Washington Seminary Alumnae Association in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association Annex will be applied to the school library fund. Mrs. Austin George is ticket chairman.

The fourth and last hearing for active membership for this season is set for 1 o'clock on April 3 and the second program will be presented on April 24. Mrs. Anne H. Woestehoff is arranging this day's entertainment, which will be the all-American program of the year. The annual club luncheon and business meeting are dated for May 8 at the Hotel Schenley.

SISTERS ARE ENGAGED

MISS MARY E. HEWITT

MISS ALICE HEWITT

Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Hewitt, Washington, Pa., have announced the engagements of their daughters, Miss Mary Elizabeth Hewitt to the Rev. Ralph L. Holland, Vandergrift, and Miss Alice Hewitt to Julian E. Corey, Detroit. A double wedding in the early summer is planned. Miss Mary Elizabeth Hewitt is a graduate of the Pennsylvania College for Women and is a teacher in the Vandergrift schools. Her sister is now a student at the P. C. W. Mr. Holland is a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College and the Reformed Theological Seminary, and Mr. Corey was graduated from Washington and Jefferson College in 1927.

"THAT LETTER" IS AGAIN DENIED

CANONSBURG, Pa., March 24.—"Some person has erred," said J. T. Bartram, superintendent of the Pittsburgh Coal Company's Midland Mine No. 1 at Houston, today, regarding testimony of his pastor, the Rev. W. G. Nowell, before the Senate coal strike investigating committee.

The Rev. Nowell, minister of the Houston Methodist Episcopal Church, told the committee he had been informed by "an official" of the Pittsburgh Coal Company the circular, "The Senators Are Coming" letter to mine superintendents on the eve of the Senators' visit to mines of this district, was original.

"Mr. Nowell withholds the name of said official," said Bartram in a statement, "but in so doing leaves in the minds of the public much suspicion as to who the tale-bearer really is. Surely he has been misinformed or has ministerpreted the statement read from said official. We take pleasure in announcing that no such letter was received at our office and firmly believe that some person has erred."

GIMBEL BROS. SALES LARGEST IN 85 YEARS

Another year of increased sales was shown in the consolidated report of Gimbel Brothers, Inc., covering operations of their six stores for the year ended January 31, 1928. The year's sales were the largest in the 85 years of the concern's history, aggregating $123,595,549 as compared with $122,679,532 the preceding year.

The net profit after all charges, including taxes and depreciation, was $1,498,535, comparing with $3,357,570 the previous year. The president of the corporation in his letter to the stockholders stated: "The extensive building operations of your company were all concluded during the past year. The expenses involved in these changes contributed largely to the reduction in earnings."

The report shows cash of $2,812,324. The five-year program of expansion, started in 1922 and involving the expenditure of over $30,000,000 in buildings and improvements, has been completed.

COMPLETE PROGRAM

On January 15th, just before the close of the fiscal year, the last step was taken by changing the name of the Pittsburgh store from Kaufmann & Baer Co., under which it was operated formerly, to Gimbel Brothers, and the general policy made to conform to that of the other stores. Gimbel Brothers now operate under their own name large stores in four different cities: New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Milwaukee, besides two additional stores in New York: Saks-Fifth Avenue and Saks and Company, Thirty-fourth street.

In his letter to the stockholders the recently elected president, Bernard F. Gimbel, describes the results of the year's operations as follows: "The total net sales for the fiscal year were $123,595,549. The company's net profit (after all charges, including Federal taxes and depreciation) was $1,498,535. The extensive building operations of your company were all concluded during the year. The expenses involved in these changes contributed largely to the reduction in earnings."

Hunts Bunco Men With Gun; Riot Call Sounded

A riot call was sent to detective headquarters and police of the Squirrel Hill Station last night when Louis Tope, proprietor of a shoe repair shop at 2109 Murray avenue, was discovered wandering with a pistol in Murray avenue near Beacon street. When questioned Tope explained that he was only looking for two men who had fleeced him out of $225. He said that he had given the men the money for a carload of valuable cloth which, he said, they had promised to turn over to him. Investigating Tope discovered that he had been swindled. Angered, he said he got the weapon and started in search of the men.

WANTS CANDIDATES' PETITIONS SET ASIDE

Fred E. Reich presented an application to Common Pleas Court yesterday to have a nomination petition of certain candidates of the Ninth district of the Twenty-ninth Ward set aside. He claims that the petitions of Harry Closs as a candidate for county committeeman, Philip Langkamp for ward executive committee, and Dolores Schaffer for ward executive committee are not properly made out and asks that the names be not placed on the Republican ballot. Judge John A. Evans has fixed Monday for the hearing.

TAXICAB DRIVER FINDS HIT AND RUN VICTIM

Left lying in Penn avenue, near St. Clair street, after having been struck by a hit-and-run motorist early today, Charles Bray, of 241 Amber street, was found by a taxi driver, who took him to his home. Bray later was ordered to the Homeopathic Hospital after a physician was called to the Bray home. At the hospital it was said the man had suffered a broken right leg and body bruises.

MATCH TRICK MYSTIFYING

By HARDEEN.

The act of conjuring has always made a powerful appeal to the general public, and, since the supply of magicians never equals the demand, he who with little or no apparatus is able to mystify through simple feats and experiments is doubly welcome to any gathering.

This series of articles is designed to place within the reach of readers an opportunity of amusing and interesting an audience. The tricks are of the most simple, impromptu nature and require little preliminary preparation.

HARDEEN.

It is with this in mind that I will present to you today the "Safety Match Trick." Both mystifying and inexpensive, this trick offers a most startling novelty.

Effect: A friend asks you for a match. You present him with a safety match which you carry loosely in your pocket. He will readily recognize it is the type of a match that requires a special preparation on which to make it ignite. You take the match from him, strike it on your shoe and return to him the lighted match. This effect is most astounding. As he knows this cannot be done. Hand him another match and he will try it on his shoe without success. You take the match from him and reproduce your first demonstration.

Secret: Secure a box of safety matches, wet the preparation on the side of the box. Then rub this preparation on the instep of the sole of your shoe. When dry it will not be noticed and will make as good a place to ignite the safety match as the side of the box.

DEFENDS AUDIT COMPANY

County Controller Robert G. Woodside was unaware, when Ernst & Ernst, public accountants, were engaged to audit the county's books, that the accountants had been cited by Senator Couzens, of Michigan, for helping large corporations to avoid paying big income taxes, the Controller said yesterday. Controller Woodside said that the work of the company here was satisfactory; that Couzens' attack was political.

Couzens on Thursday said Ernst & Ernst had rewritten numerous corporations' books to enable the companies to pay the least possible tax.

BUCS FACE FINAL TEST TONIGHT

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

B. McCaffrey.

WITH the hockey season winding up tonight, and the Pittsburgh team having a chance of finishing third and getting in the post-season play-offs, the fans of this district are facing the prospect of reading about the special games as played in some other city instead of being given a chance to see the contests themselves,

The loyal patrons who have been paying their money into the Duquesne Garden box office all through the regular season, part of the time when the exhibitions were far below big league standards, are to be rewarded, if reports from the East are well-founded, by seeing their city placed in the class of a tank town and the specially attractive games shifted to New York.

NOT only are both games with the New York Rangers next Tuesday and Thursday to be played in Madison Square Garden if the Bucs beat out Detroit for third place tonight, but if the Pirates defeat the Rangers in the semi-finals, the finals wth Boston will also be played in New York, as it is understood the Hub team cannot get the use of its own arena for the dates fixed.

In other words, the main object appears to be to "get the money."

Even if Pittsburgh wins third place and the right to participate in the play-offs, both games, instead of only one, will be played in New York because the promoters figure that bigger gates will be assuerd in Gotham.

SOME sign of this "dollars first" policy was seen in the announcement a week ago that if

CHILLY SAUCE

BY CHILLY DOYLE

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—"Gee Whiz — I'm heavier now than I've been all winter," exclaimed Lloyd Waner as he scaled the one hundred forty-seven pounds. Brother Paul sent the indicator eight pounds farther and remarked that he was heavier than his customary playing weight.

ONE POUND to Lloyd or Paul means more than five to a heavyweight. The younger brother, in particular, needs a little poundage. If Lloyd can stay a few pounds heavier than he was last season his drives should have more zip. And his speed should increase, too, for strength and speed go hand in hand. Charlie Paddock is a powerful fellow.

PETE SCOTT, holder of a nice allotment of Bank of Italy stock, was sitting peacefully in the hotel lobby yesterday when a newspaper headline caught his eye. Pete bounced as he read: Bank of Italy takes nose dive, dropping 12 points. Scott had his pencil out in a flash and a few seconds later announced

3RD PLACE AT STAKE; TO MEET RANGERS

By CARL W. SHATTO

A GAME that looms as the the "classic" of Pittsburgh hockey history will be played at Duquesne Garden tonight when the Pirates, entrenched in third place by the slender margin of one game, will attempt to defend their position against the mighty New York Rangers in the last game of the National Hockey League season.

While the Pirates are battling the Rangers here, the Detroit Cougars, the local's only rival for the last play-off and pay-off berth, will entertain the Boston Bruins at Detroit, and upon the outcome of these two fights hinges the identity of the American Group's third entrant in the post-season series for the Stanley cup and the world's hockey championship. Leading the Cougars by two points as a result of their 2-1 victory over the Montreal Maroons on Thursday night, the Pirates need only a tie in their fight with the Rangers to insure their getting into the world's title competition. Should the Detroiters lose, the Pirates will be eligible to the play-offs even though they are defeated, but should the Pirates

CHAMPIONS TO BATTLE MISSION NINE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Agitated over the enforced idleness of his squad, Manager Donie Bush of the Pirates today is planning ways and means for getting some sort of action in the event of another postponement at Recreation Park,

Two games have been cancelled on account of the wet spell and the chances for a game this afternoon were not encouraging.

EAGER FOR ACTION

"I think the fellows can stand two days of idleness without showing any ill-effects," said Donie, "but I want to guard against a third day. The pitchers, in particular, might find it hard to swing back on an even keel if they sit around three full days. The rest might not bother the other players, but I don't like to take any chances with the pitching staff."

Bush, accordingly, busied himself in the matter of securing a sheltered spot wherein the sharpshooters can work provided the moisture keeps the athletes off the ball park. He would like to have the athletes limber up on the ground beneath a roof, but he might prefer a wooden footing rather than another idle day.

It is hinted about quite strongly that more than one Pirate pitcher is tickled because of the wet weather. It is more than a suspicion that many hurlers, who have had experience here, do not like to twirl in the Seals' park.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK SPORTS EDITOR

HEREAFTER we'll take nothing for granted, believe nothing we hear or read and question everything else. For there comes to this desk a letter which places us in the same category as the gent who some years ago wrote that Mark Twain was dead, only to have the humorist himself deny the report and refer to it as slightly exaggerated.

A week or so ago, in writing of the new plan of prize distribution for the American Duckpin Congress' tournament, we wrote that it was copied from the Lewis Class System, so long used in trapshooting, and mentioned that Mr. Lewis long since had gone to the happy hunting grounds. This information was vouchsafed by a longtime follower of trapshooting and its devotees. And now—NOW—read this, a letter from the very same James (Jimmy) Lewis, typewritten on the stationary of the Bradford Oil Refining Company of Bradford, Pa., making us out a fabricator in-

Add Four To Title List

NEW YORK, March 24.—(A. P.)—While the New York State Athletic Commission has delayed whatever drastic action it may have in mind on Gene Tunney's failure definitely to accept one of the challengers on the commission's list, the acorn of aspirants for a shot at the heavyweight crown has grown into a sturdy oak. The list has been increased from three to seven with the prospect that additional delay in handling Tunney's case may give the rest of the heavyweight clan time to rally round.

The fistic fathers have added to the list the challenges of George Godfrey, Paulino Uzcudun, Jack Delaney and Phil Scott, British champion. The "first division" already is composed of Jack Sharkey, Tom Heeny and Johnny Risko.

The Penn State team rules a favorite, due to the fine record made by the Lion sharpshooters in telegraphic and dual meets so far this year.

Last Period Rally Ends Duke Hopes

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., March 24.—Hazleton High School representing the East and Lewistown the West will meet this afternoon for the state basketball chamuionship in the finals of the tourney here. Lewistown advanced to the final round last night by turning back Duquesne, the Pittsburgh district representative, 30 to 26, while Hazleton eliminated Jersey Shore 22-19. Both games were exceptionally hard fought and both were decided in the last quarter.

Lewistown completely surprised Duquesne with its final period drive, scoring 11 points to four for the Westerners in this quarter. Duquesne exhibited the best passwork of any of the four teams but could not count consistently from the field. At one time the Dukes enjoyed a five-point margin.

Hazelton was trailing by one point at the end of the third period and finished three points in front. The Jersey Shore team proved to be much stronger than expected and threatened to come out on top.

Clelan of Lewistown and Streker of Hazelton were the individual stars of the night, the former making 14 points for the largest total of the two games.

Streker won for his team almost singlehanded. He scored seven of the eight points registered by Hazelton in the final quarter and tied for high scoring honors for that game. Kowallis and Kocheran were the stars for Duquesne this pair accounting for more than half of the team's points.

Duquesne got away to a lead in the first period, and held it until the end of the quarter, leading Lewistown 6-3 at that stage of the action. In the second period, however, Lewistown rallied strongly, but towards the end of the half, fell back again so that the Steelers held a 15-13 advantage at half time.

The third period found both teams battling neck and neck, the clever passing of the Pittsburgh district quintet enabling it to lead 22-19 as the third period came to a close.

Lewistown proved to have the most reserve power, and fighting doggedly, pulled up even with the Dukes midway in the last period and then, with a fine burst of speed, passed the Pittsburghers and went into a four point lead which was continued until the end of the game.

Paddock Displays Old Form In Record Run

AUSTIN, Tex., March 24.—(AP.)—Flashing the old time dazzling speed that carried him to the topmost heights of track fame, Charley Paddock, the California flash, yesterday defeated Fred Aldermann, Illinois A. C. sprint ace, in a special 140-yard race at the Texas relay carnival in the record time of 13.4 seconds.

Performing in preparation for a berth on the 1928 American Olympic team, Paddock pulled away from his speedy opponent 30 yards from the finish to slash the old mark of 14 seconds.

MORROW QUITS W.-J. POST

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 24.—David C. Morrow, for the past two seasons football line coach and for nearly a score of years identified in some capacity with the Washington and Jefferson teams, has presented his resignation to Graduate Manager William C. Thurer and the Athletic Council. Morrow has requested that his resignation become effective as soon as convenient and the Wash-Jeff authorities have accepted it, with regret, under those conditions.

Manager Theurer in announcing the resignation, stated that no successor to Morrow had been selected.

Coach Morrow in confirming the announcement said that it was with extreme regret that he severed official connection with Washington and Jefferson, but that other business interests which had been growing in recent years made it imperative that he give up active football coaching.

The passing of Morrow removes from the Wash-Jeff coaching staff a man who has been identified longer and more prominently than any other in the development of football at the institution, and a tutor who stands among the most successful in the country.

BOWLING and BILLIARDS

KANSAS CITY, March 24.—(A. P.)—Mediocre marks for championship competition cluttered the score-boards yesterday at the tournament of the American Bowling Congress. A 640 was the best performance in the individual event, and a 1,209 topped the efforts of the doubles teams.

The leadership marks of 692 held by Fred Freitag, Milwaukee, in the singles, and the 1,247 of the St. Paul doubles competition, Matak and Wolseifer, were at no time threatened. There was no bowling in the five-man class, headed by the Meister Insurance team of Omaha with 2,969.

G. McInnery of Iowa City, Ia., with games of 180, 226 and 234, led the individual squads.

P. A. A. Teams Fail to Place in Pin Tourney

KANSAS CITY, March 24.—Twenty-six teams from various athletic clubs throughout the country fought it out for bowling supremacy in the American Bowling Congress tourney last night. They shot for their own special prizes as well as the A. B. C. awards, and the Buffalo Athletic Club Reds carried off top honors with a 2,835 mark.

Both Pittsburgh teams were out of the running, the P. A. A. No. 1 chalking up a 2,584 figure, while the No. 2 team counted 2,410. H. Gearhart spilled the pins for marks of 195, 198 and 204, to give the No. 1 Pittsburgh five a 597 total, but received little support.

BOB MOODY ANNEXES NATIONAL HEAVY TITLE

DETROIT, March 24.—(AP.)—Boxers from Grand Rapids won the majority of titles in the National amateur junior championship tournament concluded here last night. Entries from the Michigan city won championships in the flyweight, featherweight and light heavyweight divisions. New York entries won the bantamweight and lightweight crowns, while the other three went to representatives of Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Boston.

Bob Moody of Freeport, Pa., won the heavyweight title by beating Frank Slaken of Boston in a three-round final bout.

Other Pittsburgh district boxers reached the finals, only to suffer defeats in the title bouts. John Naito of Yonkers, N. Y., defeated Dan Billick of the Willow Club, Pittsburgh, in three rounds. Chester Karsten of Grand Rapids, won over Regis Davis of the Swissvale A. C., Pittsburgh, in the final in the 126-pound class. Leo Clements, another Pittsburgher, representing the Swissvale A. C., was defeated in the semi-finals of the 175-pound class.

Will Give Plan Trial

By JESS CARVER.

EIGHT tri-state colleges and universities, including all three of the city institutions, have decided to give the new plan of a central agency for the appointing of football referees, with Walter E. Okeson of Lehigh in the role of the agency, a trial. Representatives of eight, which includes Pitt, Carnegie, Tech, Duquesne, Wash-Jeff, West Virginia, Bethany, Allegheny and Geneva, expressed themselves as favoring the plan after two lengthy conferences with Okeson at the William Penn Hotel yesterday.

Walter Okeson.

The conference, or conferences, began at 2 p. m., with 17 representatives listening to an explanation of the idea by Okeson, and wound up with members of the Western Pennsylvania Referees' Association marking up a perfectly good table cloth while getting the same low down, in the evening the college men got in the afternoon.

The primary motives behind the whole scheme have to do with the formation of a uniform fair and square and systematic system of officiating.

The new plan has for its main parts the following:

1—The placing in the hands of Walter Okeson the power formerly held by Central Board to appoint officials for football games for schools coming under the jurisdiction of the board.

2—The payment of Okeson of an annual salary of $10,000 per year.

3—The reclassification of the 89 colleges into new groups, 10 in all.

4—The installation of a graduated system of fees, or contributions, according to classification, ranging from a minimum of $25 per year to a maximum of $1,000 per year.

And finally, and possibly the most important of all, the granting of absolute power on the part of the schools accepting the plan to Okeson.

At present there are 12 schools in the No. 10 rating, the highest classification. This includes Pitt, Yale, Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Penn State, Syracuse, Columbia, Brown, Army and Navy. These schools, on their own initiative, practically forced the passing of the Central Board by naming Okeson as a commissioner to name all of their grid officials, and underwriting the plan with guarantees of $1,000 apiece for five years. As far as this dozen is concerned, the plan will be carried out whether other schools follow along or not.

In the past, during the reign of the Central Board, the classifications of schools were made on the basis of tradition, size of the school and playing strength. The new classification will likely be made along the same lines, though tradition will not play such an important part. The amount of the yearly contribution will have a great deal to do with the placing of the institution.

It is the hope of Okeson to be able to cut the size of the yearly contributions as the league, if it may be termed such, grows. It will not be necessary for the No. 10 section schools to pay $1,000 if there are enough schools enrolled in the other divisions.

At present, New York University, Carnegie Tech, Wash-Jeff, Lafayette, West Virginia, Colgate, Georgetown and possible Rutgers are listed as No. 9 teams, and have been paying $75 a year. The No. 10 teams, under the Central Board, paid from $250 to $400 per year.

While the entire situation is far from being clarified, and the schools represented at the meeting yesterday with the exception of Pitt have only decided to go along for a year or so in order to give the idea a trial, it is believed that the new plan will be of great benefit to the game of football, to the schools and officials.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Pittsburgh and Detroit finished in a tie for third place the teams would not be allowed to play off for the position during the season. The reason for this probably was that the "men behind" measured the capacity of the Detroit rink against that of Duquesne Garden. Now, if they fail to get an opportunity to squeeze Detroit in ahead of Pittsburgh, they'll just pass up Pittsburgh altogether, according to the Eastern reports play the games in New York and leave local fandom holding the bag.

C. Brickley.

ALL around, it looks as if sport is being made secondary to the dollar sign, and if the league or the local club is to be run on that principle it will be no great loss to Pittsburgh if the team is transferred to another city next season. The threat to take it away begins to sound more like a promise.

THE appearance of the name of Charles E. Brickley in the news columns as having appealed from a sentence of 15 months in Boston jail on charges of conducting a bucket-shop and of larceny from clients, recalls to football followers here and elsewhere the days when Brickley of Harvard was one of the outstanding figures on the American gridiron.

As a maker of goals from field Brickley was without an equal in his day. He reached the peak of his greatness in that department when he kicked five field goals in Harvard's game against Yale on November 22, 1913. The first was from placement, and the distance was 38 yards. The four others were from drop kicks, and the distances were 30, 25, 23 and 20 yards.

THIS has been beaten only once and tied but three times. E. C. Robertson of Purdue made the intercollegiate record of seven field goals in a game, on October 27, 1900, against Rose Poly.

Jimmy Ring.

Walter Eckersall was the only college player ever to turn the five-in-a-game trick twice. The then Chicago star made five against Illinois, November 18, 1905, and the same number against Nebraska on November 24, 1906. All 10 were made from drop kicks.

The only other man to kick five in a game was B. W. Trafford of Harvard, against Cornell on November 1, 1890.

DEWITT LEBOURVEAU'S baseball career appears to be just a series of ups and downs. The action of the management of the Philadelphia Athletics in releasing him to Portland, Ore., in the Pacific Coast League, marks the third time he has been called to the majors, only to be shipped back to the sticks. His previous tryouts were with the Phillies and Giants.

Jimmy Ring is one player among the present-day diamond athletes who has him beaten, however. Ring was sent back once by Brooklyn, twice by the New York Americans and twice by Cincinnati, a total of five times.

Dazzy Vance, Jess Haines, Wally Pipp, Irish Meusel and others were dropped twice by major league clubs after tryouts, without counting youngsters sent back under options.

GEORGE ENGEL, former manager of Frank Klaus and Harry Greb, who has a German heavyweight, Rudi Wagner, in tow at present, declares that he hasn't the slightest doubt of Wagner's coming to the front.

George Engel.

"One thing that this fellow can do is hit," asserts the one-time East Pittsburgh resident. He stands 5 feet, 11 inches in height, weighs 205 pounds, and gets every ounce of his weight into his punches."

"Don't forget that he knocked out Breitenstarter in two rounds, and that Breitenstrater went the limit with Paulino Uzcuden. Rudi also knocked Jack Humbeck cold, dropping him for seven with one punch and then finished him with another.

"I honestly think that he is the best big man that has come up since Dempsey's time, and that's why I can afford to go slowly with him. He will need four or five weeks in which to become acclimatized and then a couple of tune-up bouts. I'll turn him loose about mid-summer and then you will see a real hitter."

THE dullest part of the year as far as college athletics in the Pittsburgh district are concerned, is now at hand.

Frank Shea.

Following the completion of the football season, basketball campaign also has passed into history, the swimming period is a thing of the past, and athletic affairs in general are just about zero.

That there is any activity at all hereabouts results from the fact that the University of Pittsburgh athletic authorities kept for indoor track practice the old Armory used for student drilling in war days.

IT MAY not be a very elaborate structure, but it serves the purpose. It has a 12-lap dirt and cinder running track, and provisions for jumping, vaulting, putting the shot, etc., and, though actual training is not possible, Coach Frank Shea is enabled to keep his track men limbered up for the approaching outdoor season. In that respect, at least, he has the jump on the other college track coaches in this region.

PITCHERS BREAK DOWN

Outside of one or two of Bush's flingers, who have faced the Seals, there has been a breakdown of the slab staff since the club came here. One member of the club points out that the advance of a San Francisco pitcher to the majors is a rare happening.

In all events, nobody seems to be fighting to "choose" the Seals. On the other hand, the hotel lobby has a flock of veterans and youngsters who appear to be willing to let well enough alone.

The Pirates are due to wind up affairs with the Seals and Missions tomorrow. On the following day they are scheduled to open a three-game fight in Oakland. The Oaks are sheltered in a real ball park, which has it all over, in the matter of conveniences, on the Valencia street orchard.

The Missions are the carded opponents for the Bushwhackers today.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS by HARRY KECK SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

sofar as the statement of his demise is concerned:

"DEAR SIR:

"In reading your very nice writeup of the application of the Lewis Class System to bowling, I came to one part of the account which I feel is a gross exaggeration. In fact, stepping off the scales there still are about 210 pounds of me which have not gone to the happy hunting grounds. While not quite as active as back in the days when good old George Moreland, on the old Pittsburgh Times, used to say nice things about me when I was kicking a bicycle around the Pittsburgh tracks, nor later when, through the good auspices of Jack Dafly, then associated with the Pittsburgh Post, and John Gruber, of the Gazette, I was trying to boost the trapshooting game, I still feel I am very much removed from the state you indicate.

"The Lewis Class System is copyrighted. It forms a part of a book on trapshooting, which was issued by the Winchester Repeating Arms Company when I was associated with that organization; it also is covered generally by a book called the 'Organization of Trapshooting Leagues,' issued by the Dupont Powder Company. I never felt it would be well to tie it up tightly with patents or copyrights which would make it necessary for trapshooting clubs, bowling leagues or golf associations to write the signer and get permission before using it. It was evolved for the promotion of the best interests of all sports wherein money or prizes were to be distributed. It recognized the fact that a mere few under old rules could gather to themselves the entire contribution of the many. We felt the best interests of all sports were served by having all entries feel they were competitors rather than merely contributors. Then, too, it did away with the unpleasant task of serving on the handicap committee.

"Congratulations to Mr. Wertz, sponsor of the Lewis Class System for bowling, and accept my best wishes for the success of the operation of the Lewis Class system as applied to bowling.

"Yours very truly,
"JAMES LEWIS."

ALL we can say, Mr. Lewis, is to thank you for writing this side of the grave and setting us straight. We're going out gunning for the gentleman who posted us wrong, and we won't need any system of scoring or distributing the prizes when we draw the bead.

lose and the Cougars win, the Detroiters, as a result of a league ruling which specifies that the team scoring the most goals throughout the season shall get the call, will crowd the locals out of the title series.

Because tonight's game means everything to Pittsburgh and nothing to the Rangers, and because the locals now are at the peak of their form, the Pirates will be odd-on favorites to win. Even in mid-season, when the race was at its hottest and when the Gothamites were at their best, the Pirates were able to "take" Tex Rickard's skaters here, and in more recent fights the Bucs have shown even greater power, while the Rangers slumped and permitted Boston to make off with first place. The slump almost cost the Rangers second place, for a victory tonight will put the Bucs within one point of the runner-up position.

With the exception of Herb Drury, who is nursing an injured leg, the Pirates all are in the pink of condition. The Rangers, too, are all physically fit, but it would not be surprising were they to save their best efforts for the play-offs next week.

The size of the crowd, it is expected, will be in keeping with the importance of the clash, and the Garden gates will be thrown open at 7 o'clock that a last-minute rush and crush may be averted.

OWNER TO BET $20,000 ON COFFROTH WINNER

TIA JUANA, Mex., March 24.—A duel of aristocratic equine royalty, with $70,000 hanging in the balance, is in the making in the running of the classic two-mile Tia Juana cup at Sunny Jim Coffroth's racing oval tomorrow.

W. H. Hoffman, Jr., affable owner of the R. C. Stable, which houses Crystal Pennant, winner of the Coffroth Handicap, is so enthusiastic over the victory of his game son of Pennant-Crystal Isles that he has offered to bet $20,000, at post odds, that Crystal Pennant will take the measure of the mighty distance performer, Handy Mandy, who has been established favorite.

A quotation from Jack Atkin places the Durnell charge at even money and Crystal Pennant at 2 to 1. This would mean a side bet of $40,000 on Handy Mandy against $20,000 on the Coffroth winner.

NAB MAN ON TIP IN MURDER OF WIFE

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 24.—(AP.)—Her skull crushed and her throat slashed, the body of Mrs. Roman Luczkowski, about 45, was found stuffed in a box in the dining room of her home here last night by police shortly after they had arrested her 21-year-old husband upon a tip furnished by the latter's friend, Martin Greescyk, 22 years old.

Luczkowski denied having slain his wife and disclaimed a knowledge of her death.

NABBED ON TIP

Police learned of the slaying when Greescyk walked into the detective bureau tonight and informed officers that in 10 minutes he was supposed to meet a man who had murdered his wife and help him bury the body.

Accompanied by Greescyk detectives rushed to the rendezvous where they found Luczkowski waiting in his automobile. A blanket, shovel and a flashlight were in the machine. The detectives then drove to the Luczkowski home and found the body of the woman.

Greescyk told police he was summoned to the latter's home Thursday night. When he entered the house he saw Mrs. Luczkowski lying on the dining room floor. Luczkowski he said, calmly informed him he had killed his wife.

We Inherit a Hunger Complex, But Not a Thirst for Milk or Beer

A five-day fast may give the benefits of a month's vacation, Dr. Dorsey told readers of The Sun-Telegraph yesterday. This in the course of a description of how the hungar mechanism operates. How the stomach signals for food is highly interesting, and its calls are among those in life that are not possible to deny.

All Eat Our "Peck of Dirt"

CHAPTER XL.

IN A Carnegie laboratory a man weighing 134 pounds began a test fast. With no food, but plenty of distilled water, he lost 28 pounds in a month. He lost some muscular strength, but gained in sharpness of senses and ability to learn new tricks.

GEORGE A. DORSEY

The first three days of a fast are the hardest. Suffering thereafter is imaginary, due to fear or panic. "Voluntary starvation is in no sense a heroic act;" the "exalted" feelings, sights, and sounds reported by fasting ascetics are pure hallucination, thinks Carlson. Their brains are not more active, but less: they dream! Starvation changes the nature of the blood and the tissue of the brain. Hallucinations are children of the emotions rather than of the brain.

If the baby does not like its first meal, it will refuse it, as a chick does a bitter worm. Man is born with sucking reflex and hunger mechanism; his appetite begins to be conditioned with his first meal. We do not inherit a thirst for milk or beer, or a craving for pickles or alcohol.

All eat to live and some live to eat. We inherit a hunger complex: we acquire a complex appetite. Both hunger and appetite furnish their quota to prisons, but succeed fairly well in keeping out of the insane asylum. Hunger fills almshouses, appetite supplies hospitals. The complex appetite has become an important factor in human culture and has even "shaped the destinies" of some nations. For details, consult an historical index under "Nutmegs," "Spice Islands," "Opium Wars," etc.

No Born Hogs

He is a "born hog." He may deserve the epithet, but there are no Suinae in man's ancestors. Human hogs are made, not born. Greed is not part of our inheritance, nor to the stuff we are made of has it biologic value.

Food has biologic value. We are born with a hunger complex and of parents who know by our behavior when that complex begins to act. Their reaction brings us in contact with food. That contact—physical and chemical—releases the sucking reflex, which continues until the stomach signals "stop." The hunger complex satisfied, we are not hungry. The hunger mechanism retires and the infant can give its mind to other matters. Or, as we say, we can now get down to business!

That "business" may be "big," but it ends with, where shall we eat? Later, what shall we eat? These questions are big business to millions of people—among the important "problems of life."

How are they solved? In relation to the hunger complex and the body's requirements? Or in reference to a complex appetite which ranges from soup to nuts and includes corned beef and cabbage on Monday, fish on Friday, brown bread and beans on Saturday, and a gorge on Sundays, holidays, weddings and wakes.

The hunger complex is a biologic necessity and begins with a mechanism of special receptors in mouth and nose by which we distinguish noxious physical and chemical stimuli. We may turn up our nose at many things, but certain things make us hold our nose. The bacteria of decay are enormously important in the nitrogen cycle, but we prefer our ammonia in smelling-salts. Nor is it without biological significance that our taster for bitter is thousands of times more acute than for sweet.

Trying Out Foods

We get "hungry for" this or that. What is back of that particular hunger? What is it that makes our mouth water? The newborn has never tasted food, good or bad: how does it know that it tastes good or bad. It must learn. It does learn: by the same process that life itself learns—by trying. Before many months the infant has tried out everything it can get its hands on. Its limit is the vigilance of parents and reachable environment.

We had the benefit of mother's taster. When the pie was no good she gave it to the tramp. The mother tries it out—whether it be the four-handed mother in the forest or the two-handed mother of men. Trial and error carries the infant far; and he may prefer the blacking on father's boots to the blacking mother uses on the stove. But the food the child memorizes is the food mother makes. If the first meal tasted and smelled good, and if the pleasure of a full stomach followed the pangs of a gnawing stomach, the infant has learned a lesson.

Repeat eight times a day for months, and three times a day for years. "Like mother used to make" is good psychology because it is sound biology.

The first meal was the answer to the hunger complex. The "set" of that meal was the conditioning factor in the next one: Did it "taste like more?" If it did, the foundation was laid for an appetite for that kind of food. By and by the child is weaned; other appetites are built in by the same tastes-like-more process.

So we come to like this and that, and this and that kind of cooking, surroundings, etc. But back of appetite is always an experienced or learned process: Did it look, smell and taste good, and did it "set" well. If so, we like it; we eat it with a relish, the memories of it make our mouth water; in front of it, these memories are real stimuli to the nerves of our mouth and nose. They are keyed up to such stimuli.

Taste, Appetite, Habit

We all eat out "peck of dirt." How about dirt-eaters? There are, especially children with abnormal appetites for clay, chalk, lead pencil, etc. Children experiment; if no harm comes and they like the taste, they keep it up. Same way with pickles, mustard, pepper, gum, licorice, tobacco. Whether an appetite is "depraved" or merely abnormal depends largely on taste, and taste depends on habit, custom, social usage. Caterpillars, snakes, dogs, overripe cheese, sharks' fins, "gamy" game, snails, frogs toads, lizards, monkeys, grasshoppers, grubs, dogfish, brains, tripe, birds' nests, devil-fish, blood; all favorite dishes—somewhat, some time. Each man to his own. Tastes are not be disputed, nor appetites questioned.

Man must eat: it is his nature. When, where, what, depend on his nurture. Hunger is the best sauce. And the best hunger-producer is chopping wood. After that come all other forms of physical work. The body we inherit was built up by work, its functioning apparatus is arranged for work. When we do not work our body must make other arrangements. Civilization furnishes these in the form of "Institutions." They are a credit to civilization. We shall require more, for we are only at the beginning of "Progress."

'FOX' TYPE KIDNAPER HUNTED

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 24.—Columbia's children remained safe indoors today while police and scores of citizens searched for a kidnaper who has attempted to abduct four school children.

Police sought a dark-complexioned man about 20, whose latest kidnaping attempt followed in minute detail the abduction of Marian Parker by William Edward Hickman, "The Fox."

The stranger, believe to be "The Bear," who a few days ago sent a note to Dr. H. H. Buescher demanding $1,000 and threatening the life of his daughter, may have as an accomplice a woman, police said.

Yesterday Evelyn Toalson, 9, was given a note bearing the forged signature of her father, Rucker Toalson, grocer, addressed to her school teacher, asking that the child be excused from school.

The note was respected by the teacher, who permitted Evelyn to go home. The child reached home unmolested, to find the note was not sent by her father.

The stranger's description as given by the Toalson girl, corresponded, police said, to the description of the man who made attempts to lure Don Cassidy, 11, from his home. The man eluded university students who chased him several blocks.

In all three kidnaping attempts in the last few days the man was said to have been seen driving a small green motor car.

The Toalson note was the second of its kind received by the schools. Helen Carl, 11, was given a note to her teacher bearing the forged signature of A. F. M. Carl, motor car salesman. The note asked that Helen be excused from school. It was turned over to police by the teacher, who refused to allow the child to leave the building.

Police said the writing was that of a woman.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

BY HAVEY J. BOYLE

IN OAKLAND the other day we were looking at some old fossils. We mean nothing personal about this. Some of our best friends live out there. The fossils in mind are those on exhibit in what for want of a better term we shall call the fossil room in the splendid Carnegie Museum.

OF PARTICULAR interest was a showcase showing what we paleontologists call the sub-kingdom Mullusca. We don't expect you to understand that, as it is a technical term which the layman without some study cannot be expected to know.

To reduce the thing into terms where the man in the street, or for that matter, the man in the alley, may understand, it may be well to say that the sub-kingdom Mollusca has three other names, more readily understood. So when we say that these particular remains of the sub-kingdom Mullusca are of the class Cephalopoda, of the sub-class, Dibranchiata, and of the sub-order Belemnoide the thing becomes pretty clear.

IN THIS CASE IS WHAT WE CALL THE SUB-KINGDOM MULLUSCA!

THIS exhibit indicates that some of the prehistoric animals were pretty tough fellows. These fossils at one time were part of their anatomy and now resemble nothing less sturdy than that rock which the engineers remove when they decide to make another tunnel some place.

* * *

IF THE prehistoric man had to go out and toss a stone at one of these animals, now fossilized, to get his breakfast, he was in, most likely, for disappointment. First, the stone probably didn't make the animals say "Ouch," much less kill them, and secondly, if by some other ruse the animals were captured Mrs. Prehistoric must have had quite a time boiling the thing until it was ready to serve to a grumbling master.

FOR MY LUNCH

THE fossils stir the imagination as to what went on when the world was young.

More interesting are those groups in a neighboring hall which show the wild animals which after death were handled so realistically by the taxidermist. The great lesson to be learned from those different groups is that in the jungle the male is not imposed upon as he is in civilization. Thus, it is noted, that in most cases the woman member of the jungle family does most of the work in getting food for the kids. The father is the head of the family in fact as well as in name and he takes things easy while the missus hunts and fishes for food.

MR. SANTENS at the Museum has done splendid work with the animals. Even in daylight with no one else around one feels the horrors and some of the beauty of jungle life. An imaginative writer might weave a fairish tale out of a fancy that one night a man was locked up over night in the museum with some of the animal groups coming to life.

IN THE art gallery one finds more company, for on the walls are people you meet in everyday life, boys and girls, men and women, artists, fishermen, hunters.

A Russian girl was sketching from a painting the day we were there. She had a way of flicking back a recalcitrant strand of hair with the hand that held her brush which might have inspired another artist to sketch her.

An elderly man with a beard after the fashion of the lion in front of the Dollar Savings Bank in Fourth avenue contemplated the exhibit. He was accompanied by a small boy who seemed to be as much interested in the exhibit as his grandfather.

OUR favorite bit of art was missing, a picture called "The Doctor," as old as the hills and possibly too crude for a great exhibit, yet the picture of the doctor looking at the delirious child, with the anxious mother, and the distraught father in the background always seemed here to be great art.

Saxon Resents Jerry Trying To Be the Guardian Of His Morals

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Jerry King, good looking, charming and nineteen, falls in love at first sight with Saxon Rhodes, a young architect. Marza, her fascinating mother, warns her that idealists like Saxon make poor husbands. In spite of his flirtation with other girls Jerry confesses her love for him, and when he goes abroad to study, promises to wait for him. She refuses a proposal of marriage from Heinie Ross, a wealthy suitor. Jerry agrees to wait three years longer. She wonders whether Saxon loves her as completely as she loves him. Saxon calls on his sister who warns him against marrying anyone and facing poverty. Saxon's attention to Ora Pringle gives Jerry a pang of jealousy. Saxon apologizes for his neglect. They attend a week end party where things start to happen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

WITH sudden inspiration, he went back and searched the ground. He came upon the puddle, dipped his fingers into this and smelt it.

"What's your idea?"

"It was my share. I can do what I please with it!"

"As you please! I suppose I'm drunk in your opinion?"

"You've had ALMOST enough. In my opinion."

He held her very coldly as they danced. And she didn't try to win him—didn't try to blaze or taunt or even to equal him in an insolent audacity.

She was tired of it. So many times before she had been blithe or wicked or merry. And had won a temporary triumph.

Tonight her feet were heavy. She felt crushed and futile. You can't buck a game like this—one against the mob.

When he went to dance with Ora she thought in a wild bitterness: "Let her hurt him! I hope she does. I don't give a damn!"

An hour later she was winding through the trees on a bank above the grove. Languorous August night—breathless except for the drift of perfume from that vast bed of stocks.

In the shadows couples were seated, murmurs of their whispers. And in the dance hall other couples moved languidly. She was used to all this—this open petting; this surfeit of caresses.

And she now very callously regarded a couple on the slope below her. Golden little Nellie Spears lost in the arms of Bert Rogers—not a spark of honest passion to it. You never saw Inga Brent, who was fire-heated and a gypsy, do a thing like that. No one did.

She came to the lighted swimming pool. The band was playing here now. They were all dancing on the sands.

"I've been looking all over for you," said Hugh Hammond, swinging her into a waltz which he did delightfully but with an old-fashioned step. "Should you like to swim? Look, they are going in now."

As they moved to the rail, Jessie Reinach, a tall, spineless girl full of squeaks and squeals and willing at any embarrassing cost to win masculine attention, now came from the dance-hall swinging a brilliant Chinese shawl tightly about her.

Someone pulled the fringe.

"Careful, dear," warned Jessie.

Swish went the shawl. Jessie clung and squealed and giggled. In a moment two or three were after her, the shawl whisked this way and that.

"My Lord—they can't do that!" said Hammond, greatly worried.

"Oh, don't bother. Jessie always gets into some girly-girl tragedy like this. She adores it."

The shouting about Jessie was now excited, raucous, determined.

"But think how the girl will feel, Miss King, we can't allow this!"

The shawl was off. Jessie shrill and with little shakes of her shoulders, pulled out the wide skirt of a very bouffant evening gown. "Smarties—aren't you smart."

"Throw her in the pool—pull off the glad rags!"

This time Jessie was really frightened.

Hugh Hammond turned white. "We can't jolly well stand here and see the girl hurt."

"Don't worry! Drunk as they are, they wouldn't be bothered. Seeing it's Jessie."

He gave her a horrified glance. She shrugged: "Oh what's the odds, as Ann Veronic says—flesh or flowers they're all alike to me."

But she was shaking—clinging to the rail with her eyes closed. Just like a damn little fool like Jessie Reinach to start this mess.

Shrieks from Jessie, who was now sprawled on the sands, hugging vague chiffons about her. Rip—off came a scarf.

Hugh Hammond flew down the path: "Listen fellows," said he, bursting into the group.

"Into the pool with him—into the pool!"

He was pitched head first. In the excitement of this, Jessie was forgotten. She sat upright, bawling and hysterical and striking at anyone who offered assistance.

The group about the pool roared with laughter as Hugh, impeded by his heavy shoes and his starched shirt, swam to the opposite bank.

Jerry came out of a sickened daze to hear Inga: "We're going—we've had enough. . . Where's Saxon? Go and get him—we're goin back tonight—He's in the house with HER."

CHAPER XXX.

MUSIC mingled with the warm, perfumed languor of the night; drifted about shadowy figures winding through the trees. Now a laugh startled the silence, now a note of thrilling song.

Jerry, moving swiftly down the dim path from the pool, paused at a lofty redwood. She felt weak and leaned against it. The sounds were muffled here—all muffled, indistinguishable, sweet. The lanterns swaying in the trees had a blowy, wistful look. All so lovely.

She went on slowly, with an overpowering reluctance that increased with each step and was like an iron collar when she reached the house.

Mechanically she repeated Inga's words: "We're going home. Get Saxon. He's in the house. With HER!"

"Oh," she thought intently as though it were important, "more people have come." There were three more machines parked in the drive.

From the house came a loud wailing one-step. The dance floor was empty except for a single couple moving with tantalizing slowness in that far, unlighted alcove.

But the wide veranda adjoining this and built to command a sweep of hills and terraces and distant water was now a scene of half drowsy excitement. On one sofa a young man slept, a listless hand trailing the floor. Nearby, stretched on two chairs and now and then restlessly turning, was a girl of 18. But these and two or three others in similar poses were no more noticed than the furniture.

The excitement centered about a group at the door. Three girls, three fellows. A fourth girl entering.

"What a hell of a place to spend the week-end" she mumbled indistinctly. "I'm tired—wanta go to sleep. Can't find a bed in the house. Been everywhere."

She flung a long brown braid of hair over her shoulder and gave an uncertain tug to her shoulder strap. She was barefooted and in her nightgown and now slumped on a sofa between two of the youths who assisted her in adjusting and readjusting the shoulder strap.

"Oh, Lord!" thought Jerry bitterly and blinking, "where is he? Where in the devil IS he?"

She paused at the landing on the second floor. There was a balcony here just above the veranda. It, too, overlooked the wide swinging valleys, the inspired march of distant hills.

Just above, gleaming in the pines, was the moon—a white, midnight moon.

They had watched a moon like this—that night long ago. And she knew then that she loved him—that she always would.

She pressed her face against the cool ivy climbing over the columns. She was afraid to look for him—afraid to find him.

Now Inga was calling—Inga running up the stairs.

"I don't know where he can be," said Jerry listlessly, meeting her. "I've been all over."

"Try a few doors!"

Inga gave a loud knock. Opened one, then another.

"Oh, don't!" Jerry pleaded.

Inga flung open the fourth. Ora and Saxon sitting on a divan. The room dim.

Suddenly it was lurid; it was reeling; Jerry in the center of it; in the center of destruction and havoc.

She saw him spring guiltily, angrily to his feet; heard his voice; heard her own; knew that she was stamping her foot, flinging hotly: "We're going home! Now!"

That he started to answer with the suave dignity liquor gave him: "Oh, are we? We came to spend the week-end if I remember correctly. . . ."

Then his voice thickened; he lost the sequence and began to repeat.

This was terrible to her—appalling. She had never seen him drunk like this, before.

"Oh," said she, moving to him, taking his hand, "please come, Saxon. We're going because a dozen more people have arrived. Th re's not room for half of us—please—"

"You jush go if you like—jush go and see—jush do that."

They got him to follow down the stairs. The moment the cool night air struck in his face he was sobered. Sobered outwardly and hostile.

"No, sir, I'm not going home!" he insisted, belligerently. "Hell of a trick. What's the grand idea? You've stayed up nights before."

He turned abruptly: "That's that!" and joined a group at the table. He poured whisky into a large coffee-cup—filled it to the brim.

Jerry dashed to him, snatched the cup.

"That's twice tonight," said he, raising the bottle to his lips. "Great little mama, aren't we?"

She turned abruptly, stung to the heart. Even drunk, the Saxon of three years ago would not have said this. Would never remotely have felt it. She went out and joined the group at the machine.

"You might as well go," said she, "He's not coming."

"You're not going to stick around and wait for him, are you?" inquired Inga with a flashing indignation. "What good can you do?"

"I don't know. None—I suppose. I feel like staying—I don't know why—"

The wind lifted the wavy topknot and in the silver moonlight her eyes were soft blue flames. . .

"I don't know—but I think I'll stay—" She stood forlornly gazing at the gravel, rubbing it with her foot.

She knew that she would stay because she wished to be near him. She could have wept because of the terrible maternal urge she now felt sweeping her to him—holding her here.

"Well," said John, climbing out of the car, "come on Jer—we'll go back and get him." He took her arm in his sweet, lovable way: "Don't worry, kid—he's really not drunk—not very drunk."

They wound back through the gardens to the house. Saxon was not at the table now. He was not dancing. They wandered to the swimming pool.

Then back up to that room. Not there.

They returned to the drive.

Suddenly Jerry pointed a thin brown finger. For a moment she couldn't speak. Then softly—almost inaudible: "Is that he—there?"

She grabbed John's hand, forcing him to run. She called gaily, "Saxon—Saxon!"

He and Ora had climbed to a machine. They were starting. Fifty yards distant. "Hurry, John—hurry!"

She called again.

The car leaped with a spurt. Jerry shut her eyes. She gave a vague high laugh. Now the car was flying down the road—vanished.

"I guess you better come with us."

"Yes," said she smiling in John's face. "I guess I might as well."

She sat quietly in the tonneau with Frank and Kate Noles. She watched the trees flying into the black night sky and the white, white moon shinning so brightly.

"Oh, my God," she thought suddenly, pressing her palms together. "He's gone—he's gone now—"

She sat stiller than before and pondered this. Presently she said: "It's true. He's gone."

CHAPTER XXXI.

HALF past three that still August morning, Jerry stole into the empty living room. The moon shone through the window, lighting up whole shelves of books.

"How bright it is," she thought. "I never saw the moon so cold and bright."

Nothing sad about this, but it made her blink. She added forlornly: "I think I can read by this light."

And she tried to. Suddenly she shut her eyes, assaulted by the vision of a girl running down a dim path; a distracted figure sending out that gay call: "Saxon—oh Saxon—" The machine speeding away.

So now it was all ended. She knew that it was ended.

She sank in a chair and leaned her head against the cushions. She shivered with the cold. But she didn't care. It was comforting to shiver with the cold.

Out of her chill ache and tumult a phrase leaped. Her eyes burned with it and her thought. "Great little mama, aren't you? Taking care of me already?"

It was this phrase that did it; this phrase that now blightingly, ruthlessly awakened her.

She sank lower in the chair, making a gallant attempt to smoke. She didn't care that he was drunk. Nor even that he forsook her for Ora. Things like this—passing episodes, she could overlook.

All summer long she had been meeting them. Now with a wicked audacity; now with young, insolent gaiety. Oh, what of a kiss with golden Nellie Spear; what of a tropic moment with Tess? Or even what of an unpleasant rowdyism over Jessie Reinach? She—gay, captivating Jerry King could compete and triumph over them all.

And she had. Not as flagrant as this incident. But in kind, the same.

The realization that now shattered her thought was this: Saxon Rhodes no longer wanted the things she wanted. Her dream was not his dream.

He was not now the lover who had sat beside her one golden night in August just three years ago and murmured with rough, warm cheek pressed to hers: "Oh, Jerry, marriage shouldn't be such a failure. For us, it wouldn't. We're not tricked by any mere lure of the sense. I love you from your little brown hands to your wild sweet spirit. We could make a go of it!"

Murmuring this to her, picturing the two of them in a great studio room, joyously working out their bright, thrilling destinies. A twofold blooming. Why not? "We can! Oh, Jerry, we will!"

And looking forward to this dear supreme, enduring emotion. Believing in it.

Katie Details to Madge the Snooping of the Strangers Around the House

IF I had had any breath left to take away, Katie's announcement that the Transvanian vagabonds had been "snooping around" the farmhouse would have performed that famous feat successfully. But I already was practically breathless from the excitement of Miss Lincoln's swoon and my conjectures as to the cause of it, conjectures which Katie's words had just crystallized into conviction. With a feeling that the Mad Hatter was due to put in an appearance soon, I sat down in the nearest chair and stared at my little maid.

"Did you see them?" I asked finally.

Katie tossed her head.

"I no tell tings mitout I see dem mit my eyes or hear dem mit my ears," she retorted loftily. "Now you vant hear vot I see und hear?"

I struggled with my sense of the fitness of things for a second or two, and decorum lost. Theoretically I disapprove of tales brought from the kitchen, but under the bizarre circumstances surrounding me, I do not believe many women would have refused to hear the story which my nod of acquiescence gave Katie permission to relate.

"Vell," Katie began, drawing a long breath and patently preparing to enjoy herself to the utmost, "you know dot leetle side porch off keetchen vere me und dot Jeem sit evenings?"

As I personally had supervised the rebuilding of that porch in order that Katie and Jim might enjoy the cool air and privacy on their side of the house that the rest of us did upon the big front veranda, I signified my knowledge with an impatient little nod, and Katie swept on.

"Vell, tonight me und Jeem, ve hurry mit silver and cooking things und pile up dishes and make eferyting nice und neat. Den Jeem, he say hees head ache und he going to hit hay. But I too tired to go up stairs, und I mooch varm. So I say I sit on porch leetle bit and cool off. Maybe I sleep on cot on porch eef I feel like eet.

"Vell, Jeem he say eef I vant be big fool und catch my deat's cold it won't be his funeral, und I tell heem dot's right, you bet your boots, und den he go oop stairs and I turn me out all my lights und I go on porch und I sit me down in chair.

"You see," Katie broke off the thread of her story to explain, "my shoes hurt und I have dem off, und mit lights turned off nobody can hear or see me coomin' out on porch. Eef anybody watching dey hear up stairs door close und see' light sweetch on in our room, und dey tink I go up mid dot Jeem. You see?"

Again I nodded, and Katie drew closer to me and lowered her voice.

"Vell, I seet dere bout five meenits und den I hear foony noise like somebody cooming careful troo dose bushes near orchard. First I vos scared. Den I say, 'You poor feesh, don't you know dot cow step yet?' Jeem must have tied her close oop tonight. But eet didn't sound loud like a cow, un den I tink maybe dog go by.

"Den I see someting moving along orchard fence, but eet so like shadow dot I not see vedder dog or cow or man bent all over. But someting tell me eet no dog or cow, und I begin get scared. I shoost getting ready to roon in front und call you ven I heard awful noise like owl hoot, und den a voman yelled. I joomp oop und I tink I roon front und help, ven round house like jackrebbit rooning, coom man heading for hill, und behind heem Meester Graham as eef he hunting dog."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN -:- -:- By ELEANOR GALE

Smile

DEAR MISS GALE:

I'm making my debut into this column. Am I accepted? Who'd ever think that I would have any trouble with love? Not I. Here I come stumbling along with an awful big weight on my heart. It's so heavy, it's breaking my heart, so Miss Gale I'm asking you, but not only you, I'm asking the rest of the folks of the column to give their opinion on this letter, and I want their advice also as to how I should proceed. About eight months ago I met a fellow that I began to care for. The first three months my mother didn't say a word against him, but rather seemed to like him. At the beginning of the fourth month my mother began to say things about him, such as, "He's only a drunkard," "He's only a farmer, has no manners," "He's making a fool of you, and you're too dumb to know it," "He talks about you behind your back," "He goes out with other girls," "He only comes to see you when he can't get anyone else to go out with." She has no proof at all that he was ever drunk. He used to drink, but stopped. He hasn't had a drop of liquor for about two months and doesn't ever intend taking any. The reason she says he's a farmer and has no manners is because he's had rough going all his life, and tried his darndest to get an education, but only succeeded in getting eight grades of schooling, as his father died when he was only 4, it being necessary that he go to work as soon as he was old enough, which he did. I don't hate this in him. I love it; it takes backbone and lots of spunk for a kid of 14 to work. I can't give any reason as to why she thinks he makes a fool of me, and I really don't think mother, herself, can give any reason. And as to talking about me behind my back, well, he did tell my girl friend's friend that he wasn't going with me any more, but when I asked him if he said it he told me he did, and that the reason he said it was because he didn't think it was any of her business who he was going with. Mother has no proof that he goes out with other girls. For a fact, I know he doesn't. Really, I don't know why she says he only comes to see me when he hasn't anyone else to go out with for, because he practically wants me to go out with him every night. Just at the present time he isn't working, so we can't get married on nothing. I told him that I was thinking of going away, in other words, run away, but he says I won't be gone a day when he'll be after me. I told him I wouldn't tell him where I was going, but he said, "I'll find you, you can't hide from love." Do you think he loves me? Miss Gale, he is 23 and ought to know his own mind. I'm just 18, but don't you think that I ought to know my own heart in eight months. We weren't going to get married until I was older, but as things are, what can we do? You know, Miss Gale, this has gotten so much under my skin and is always pressing on my mind that I find where people used to seek my company, they now avoid it. I very seldom even SMILE.

Of course you are unhappy about all this, my dear, but I must say this young man doesn't impress me very favorably, even through your letter. You say he isn't working. If he had the right viewpoint on life he would find some kind of work so that he would have enough money in a year or so to be able to marry you. You are quite right in believing that one cannot marry on nothing, but the man who is "not working at present" is a poor sort to depend on for life. Your mother loves you and wants nothing but your happiness, so you can trust the advice she gives you.

Blue Eyes

DEAR MISS GALE:

I want to ask you for a little advice. I go with a fellow that has a coupe, but he is very bashful and he never kisses. What would you advise me to do? I am deeply in love with him. BLUE EYES.

Nothing. What do you have to object to in this boy? He quite meets with my approval.

Joli-Coeur

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been going with a fellow for over a year. My family does not approve of him. Their reasons are that: (1)He is not my social equal. (2) They do not want me to go too much with one fellow. (3) In an indirect way they heard things about his "past" which they do not approve of. (4) According to them, he could not give me the things to which I am accustomed. Now, Miss Gale, of course I don't believe in "social equals," he seems to be my equal, my friends like him, though he is quiet and hard to understand sometimes. I am to meet his family soon—maybe I will know more about the "social" end of it then. As to the things about his past, my family cannot prove these "hear-says." I believe a fellow can live down a "past" if he really tries—and that it should not stand in the way of his future. Also his "past" was not really as bad as it was painted. He drank but has not done so for months. At Christmas time, he gave me a ring. It was not an engagement ring—but it meant a lot to both of us. My family wants me to give it back to him. I see no reason for doing so. It would be absolutely no use for me to give the ring back and promise not to see him—I would only break that promise—and lie—lie! Why—oh, why do they try to force me to give him up! If it is only infatuation—would it have lasted a year? And still be burning brightly? I will not worry him until I am sure of myself—and him. (I'm sure now, but believe I should wait a month or two, don't you?) We are of different religion—I would have to give mine up—but I would be glad to for him! This fellow is very jealous and does not approve of my going out with others. As to that—I do not enjoy other dates—they bore me, I long for "him," and talk of him continually. However, it is much easier for me at home if I go occasionally with someone else. Dad is very suspicious and sneaks around trying to discover something wrong in our "affair." He insults the fellow as much as he possibly can. Now, in this case, whose part should I take? Do I owe my father all that? Should I do my best to make my parents understand me. (I have tried that—and it did not work.) Shall I give him up for them? Shall I try to keep both, but failing in that, choose "him?" What shall I do? Help me if you can in this great decision! JOLI-COEUR.

No one but yourself, my dear, knows whether you love this man well enough to give up family, religion and friends for his sake. It is a big step to take, and demands more thought than you can give it in a "month or so." Be very sure that there is nothing in this "past" that can come up later and humiliate you. Try not to be blinded by your infatuation, and look on the matter from all angles. It means your whole life, you know.

Rita Ray

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have often benefited by your wonderful advice and so to say "have come back for more." Miss Gale, I work as a stenographer and bookkeeper for a large firm. Soon after I began working here a young man was hired to fill a vacant position. That was eight months ago. Now, Miss Gale, this fellow, whom I shall call Ray, asked me to go out with him several weeks ago. I accepted the invitation and since then we have been keeping steady company. No one in the office knows of our friendship and whenever we meet during business hours it is always "Miss and Mr." Now, please tell me, do you think that it is wrong for us to go on loving each other or will we become tired of seeing each other daily and some evenings? My girl friend and my parents say we will, but we are both old enough to know that we are not merely infatuated with each other. Please, Miss Gale, help me out of this perplexing situation. Any advice will be received with much thanks. RITA RAY.

I see no reason why you should give up your friendship just because you happen to work in the same office.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters sent to this department must be written on one side of the paper only, and that no personal replies are ever given.

Jacqueline

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl not quite 21 and would like to have a nice fellow to go around with have a good time. I am five feet nine inches in height and it seems I can't find a tall boy friend, and I don't seem to take any interest at all in any fellows smaller than myself. I have the chance to go with smaller fellows, but I always refuse. Now I happened to meet a nice fellow from another town who is much taller than I and who stays in this town. I became interested in him the moment I met him because he especially appealed to me because of his height. Of course, I have just met him, but I thought I might get him interested, but I happened to find out that he has a steady girl from his own home town. Should I let that worry me? I am a blonde, not beautiful, nor hard to look at either, but it seems fellows like to fool around with me but don't ask me for dates. I always try to be cheerful and nice to them. How can a girl entertain a fellow, Miss Gale? When I go out for an evening with a fellow I can't enjoy myself the whole evening through because I worry about what to do to entertain him when we get back home. I don't play cards, nor play a piano, but I am learning. Thanks for your advice and may you continue to be helpful to others as you always have been. JACQUELINE.

It isn't fair to judge men solely by their height, my dear. That makes no difference in character, you know, and that is what really counts. Nor is it fair to try to win this man away from the other girl, just because his height appeals to you. Can't you have a good time talking to a man? Trying to "entertain" him is usually a fruitless endeavor. Be cheerful, interested in what he has to say, and he will be sufficiently entertained if he likes you.

Heart-Broken

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have bene a constant reader of your column for the past couple of years, and agree with all the answer with which you reply to all the letters you receive. I am going to explain my trouble to you so you can give me some good advice. I am a young man of about 20 and have been going with a young girl of 16 for the past six months and love this girl very much. But after keeping company with her for about five months I always thought to myself that I did not deserve this girl's friendship, and I felt that I was not good enough for her. That was my idea. She is a very good-looking girl, although I am not a very bad-looker myself. She never went out with other men until I came along and began a friendship with her. One day recently this girl surprised me. She has married and single sisters. One day we went up to her sister's place to spend the day and they began to pass the drinks around and offered her about one-fifth of a tumbler. She refused and her sister said, "Go ahead and take it; it won't hurt you." But I did not like that idea of drinking. I do not drink or smoke and never intend to. I have no desire for such junk. That is the first time I have seen her drink, and it was the last, for after a little while I got into an argument with her about that drink and broke company with her. Miss Gale, do you think I did right? I love this girl very much and always feel that I will, though I do not go up to see her. HEART-BROKEN.

Her sister was to blame, Heart-Broken, not the girl. Try talking it over with her reasonably, instead of quarreling, and I am sure she will see the matter as you do.

Broken-Hearted

DEAR MISS GALE:

Really Miss Gale I don't know how to start this letter, but to come right out with it I'll tell you, I'm in love. In love for over a year with the one and only one I care for or ever will. This fellow that I love keeps steady company with a girl, and I know he loves her, and she likes him. So what can I do! She might like him, but she doesn't love him like I do. For no two persons can love the same person the same, can they? And I'm sure she doesn't like him like I do. I'd go through fire and water for him. Imagine me, a girl, saying that. But it's true. I don't know what to do. I've often thought of suicide. And I know I'd be game enough to do it. But I don't know if he's worth it. I wouldn't have him anyhow. He gave me my chance, but I didn't take it. I did some awful things that hurt him and he turned to the other girl. And I don't think he'd leave her now. But I want him, Miss Gale. How can I get him? He told me once he loved me. I know he did. But how I love him. Now don't think this is some silly school girl writing, but it's not. I'm 19 years old, and have been out in the world making my own way for about four years, and I know my mind, too. I go out with different fellows. Lots have asked me for steady company, but what's the use? I'm not good looking. I don't drink, smoke or swear in company of men; but I do pet a little. So please tell me what to do. I'll do anything you say, but forget him. BROKEN-HEARTED.

I know that it is hard for you to look at this matter sanely, my dear, but just stop and think. What could you possibly do to swerve a man from the girl he loves? And if he could be so easily taken away from her he wouldn't be worth while, because some other girl would take him from you after a while. You are too young to be so sure that he is the only one you can ever love. Try to think less morbidly and be grateful for your youth and resiliency.

Downhearted

DEAR MISS GALE:

Some time ago, my letter was printed in your column. My old boy friend no longer dates me and when he is in the same crowd with me, he treats me like a stranger. This hurts me so much, because I still love him and can't forget him. Isn't there some way I could win him back? I am now going with a fellow whom I do not like, just because I cannot bear to sit alone and think of my old sweetheart. I can stand him and that is all. He thinks I like him but I don't have the heart to tell him I don't, because he is so easily hurt. He would be all right as a friend but never as a lover. He says he likes me better than any other girl he ever knew and I know he is in earnest. He is really getting serious. He is always calling me "sweetheart" and "honey" and telling me how much he loves me. I hate this because it gets so monotonous when you don't like a fellow. He is so jealous. Although I told him I couldn't go steady with him, he gets angry every time I make a date with another fellow. Now what I want advice on is this: How can I get rid of him without hurting him and still retain his friendship? Should I refuse dates from him, tell him I no longer like him, that I never did like him? Please give me some of your wonderful advice real soon because I am still, DOWNHEARTED.

I wish I could tell you how to win your former friend back, but there is no way if he has really turned against you. Tell this other boy that you will remain his friend only so long as he treats you as a friend and not a sweetheart. Put the matter up to him and act accordingly.

F. A. T.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a young man 19 years old and I would like to have you give me some help on a question that is worrying me. When I was a sophomore in high school I met a very nice girl. We started to go out a little. Time went on until I finished high school. Now, since I finished high school more than a year ago we have been keeping steady company. I love her and she loves me. Now the question is this: My mother doesn't want me to go steady with her. Not because she has anything gainst the girl, but because she thinks I will marry the girl in the near future. I don't want to get married for about 10 more years yet. When I get married I want to be somebody in this world. Now Miss Gale, would you please advise me as to what I should do? F. A. T.

You are both too young to settle down to each other exclusively, so why not have other friends, too? That would relieve your mother's mind. Then, too, you have no right to monopolize this girl's time if you do not intend to marry her.

Wild Party Defended; How Wild?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HERE is a very charming letter from a young woman who believes in "wild parties." Do you agree with her conclusions? If not, what is wrong with her reasoning in your opinion?

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I have been especially interested in comments in regard to petting.

"Now, I write to enter a mild note of disagreement. 'Mac,' in a recent letter to you, said no real man would let his sister go on a petting party. Moreover, he implied that no real man would like a girl who necked—not seriously.

"Now I have three brothers who, I think, may well be classed as real men. They are clean-cut, good sportsmen and excel in sports. They are altogether lovable.

"My brothers not only like to have me go to petting parties and 'hot affairs.' They even declare it is a relief to have a sister to whom they can talk freely, because she is not a prude.

"FURTHERMORE, I have a most charming husband, who is also a 'real man.' He will probably be a member of this year's Olympic team. I met him on a wild party and went with him on many more. And either because of it, or in spite of it, he liked me well enough to marry me.

"It seems to me very natural to want to use to its utmost a newly-found power. And petting is the result of physical maturity — a very great power, indeed. Therefore, it seems to me, the really worth-while young man is the one who, being of an age to like petting, frankly admits that liking, and defines his code of 'honor' in such a way as to include the girl who is equally frank.

"My husband is that kind of man. As a result I have found him a great lover, and, above all, patient and understanding. I can give him no higher praise than that. There are so few men with an honest understanding of life.

"We have two beautiful babies—if you will pardon a mother's pride—a son and a daughter three months old. We both agree, that, as they grow older, we will want them to live fully, trying each power that is theirs as it matures, in order that their minds may be as beautiful as their sturdy little bodies. For it isn't the thing you do, but the way you do it that matters. "A. B."

THANK you for your interesting and tolerant letter, A. B. It is good to get different points of view, because only in that way can we arrive at truth. And that is, of course, our common goal.

I wonder whether we both mean the same thing by certain terms. Unless we do we shall not understand each other.

Wild parties, for instance! Now just what do you mean by "wild parties" which you, your brothers and your husband approve?

Do you mean by the term, as most of us do, affairs where there is drinking of hip-flask liquor—parties where it is not uncommon for a girl to become intoxicated, and at the mercy of the escort who chances to drive her home?

Promiscuous petting, with a kiss for every man, is the code at such parties. The standard of behavior and "honor" is set by irresponsibility and recklessness of persons in various stages of intoxication.

Wild parties often lead to the hospital, sanitarium, prison or worse. A young American girl wrote recently: "If I had attended church instead of going to wild parties, I wouldn't be awaiting death on the scaffold of a Canadian prison."

I HARDLY think you refer to such parties. I cannot imagine a contestant for Olympian-game honors attending such affairs. I know that at least one ex-champion of the world at boxing respects his own splendid body so highly that he does not even smoke, much less indulge in "wild" dissipation. If, however, by wild parties, you mean gay, harmless good times, I agree with you in approving and liking them.

Newly-developed powers may well be used—wisely. But the greatest power that comes with physical maturity—the power absolutely essential to success in love, marriage, home harmony and life, is self-restraint. Promiscuous necking is not self-restraint. It is self-indulgence, just as drunkenness is.

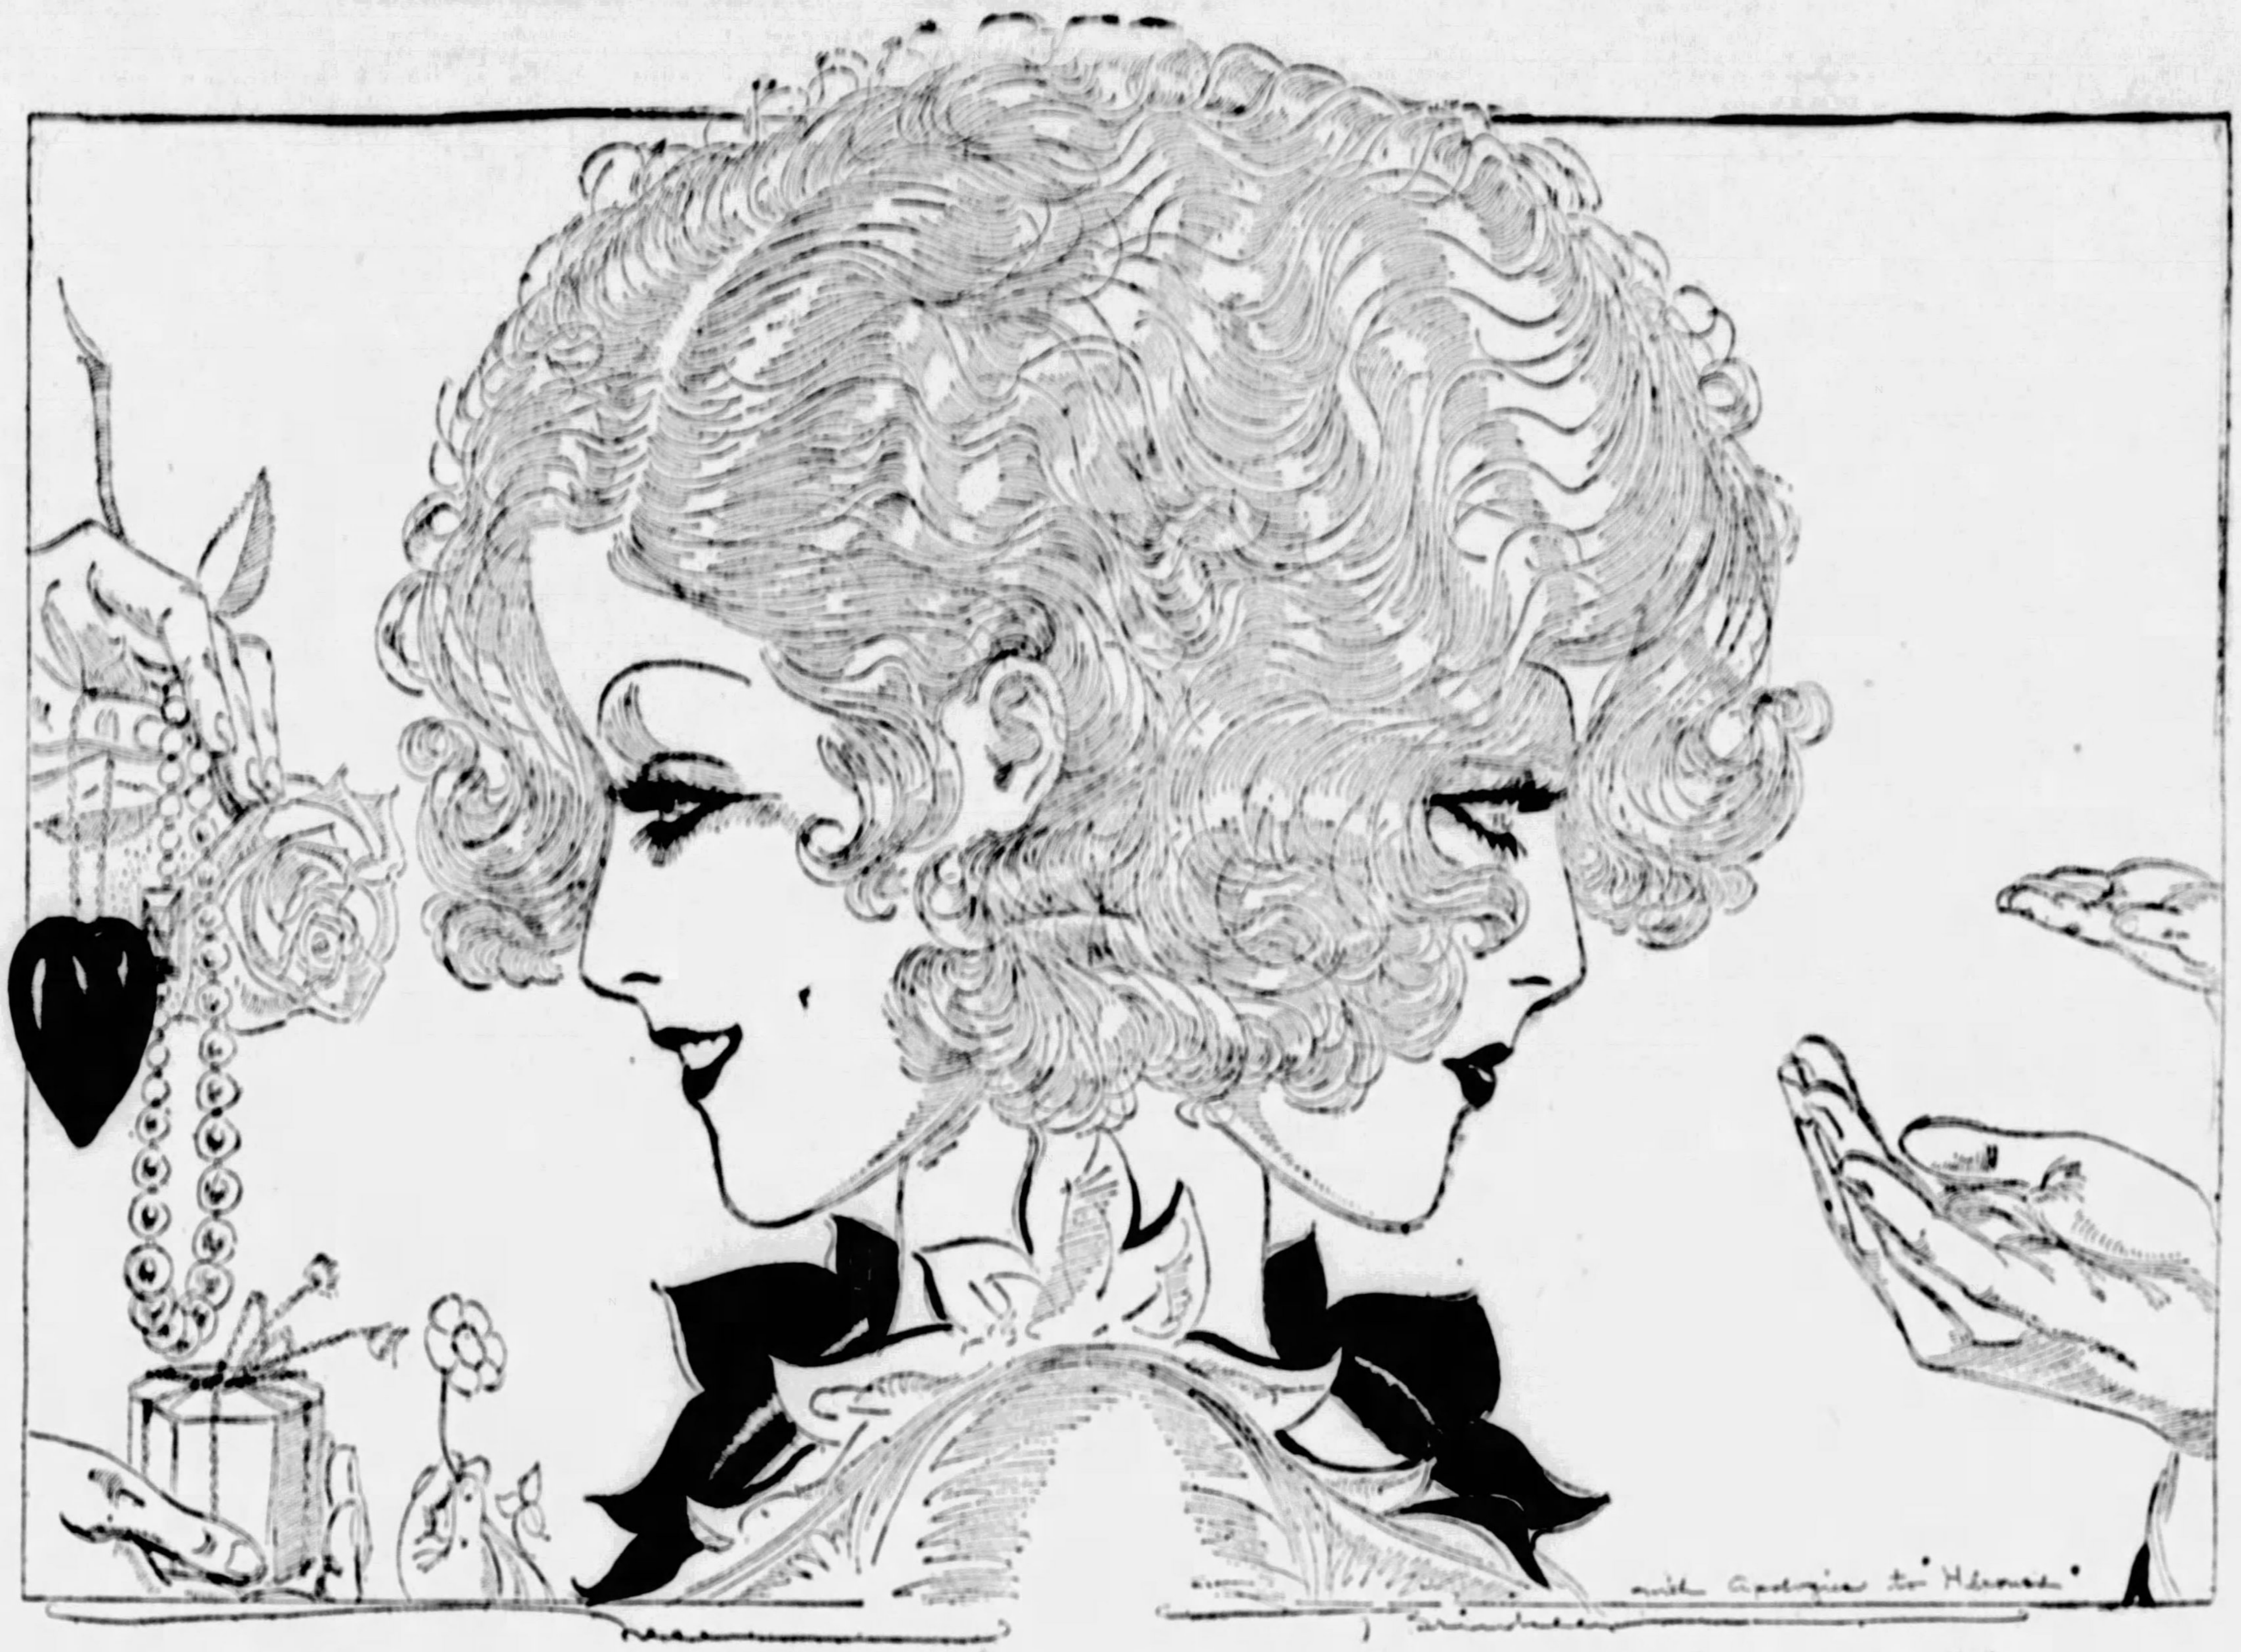
THE FAIR-WEATHER GIRL

Drawn by
NELL BRINKLEY



WHEN THE WORLD GIVES. AND WHEN IT ASKS ? !

THERE are certain things that never are old-fashioned, no matter how many times they are called so. Good mothers; honest, upright fathers; children who love their fathers and mothers; the home gathered about a cheerful dinner table; the man or the girl who can be believed; kind hearts; unselfish hearts.

The amiable girl-flower whose warm heart is in her eyes and smile, who gives out perfume on the air of the world and is not always asking, "What—WHAT am I going to get back in return?" grows right alongside the brilliant girl-flower who gives only beauty to the world and sometimes not that; a young lady to whom everything sticks, who flaunts and smiles and nods when it does so, but curls up meanly and sulks when the world asks for either pleasure or charity at her hands.

Don't be a Fair-Weather Girl if you want the world to love you. And whereabouts is that girl who doesn't? Don't be the girl who can smile like the rising sun itself when everything is coming her way, when the rest of the world is giving to her, but who goes under a cloud when SHE is asked to give, if you want the part of the world that already does love you to keep on doing it more and more. And which girl is it that doesn't want that, and dread its waning, with every heartstring in her breast?

Don't hold out your hand—EMPTY—all the time. That's to be a beggar, you know. YOU be the girl to drop something into the clinking tambourine that holds the world's kindnesses, its gifts to one another. And you'll get LOVE back in return.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Horoscopes

Sunday, March 25

Surely we know that astrology, like theology, must have had its origin in man himself.—D. BRYANT.

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows difficult and adverse situations generally. It is admonished that endeavors be turned exclusively in the direction of self-control and introspection, lest activity cause trouble. Beware treachery also.

Those whose birthday it is are on the verge of a difficult year, with many problems and anxieties, which may be aggravated by indulgence in rash and tempestuous conduct. Precaution against fraud and deceit are also enjoined.

A child born on this day should be given the earliest training and discipline in self-control and self-indulgence as well as in straightforward methods of conduct.

Notable Nativity: Edward Bellamy, author and reformer.

Monday, March 26

Monday's astrological forecast is contradictory. While there are excellent prospects in employment, in inventions, travel with good financial opportunities, yet contracts, agreements and writings of every nature are under a menacing aspect. With care in this respect and discretion in personal affiliations all may be turned to good account.

Those whose birthday it is may count on a year of opportunity, with good prospects in business, in journeys and in employment if they will be on guard against misrepresentations and trickery with contracts and all manner of writings and papers. Home affairs also call for discreet management.

A child born on this day should be clever, original and ambitious, but may incline toward expediency rather than principle, unless given rigorous training in truth and probity.

Notable Nativity: Nathaniel Bowditch, American mathematician.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.
U.S. Senator From New York

A Price Must Be Paid for a "Boyish Form"

WE ARE a people of fads and fancies. If a thing is the "style," or if it strikes our fancy, it makes no difference what it costs in time, money or trouble. We do thoroughly whatever we undertake.

DR.COPELAND

For these reasons, when we are in the mood to start something, we should make sure it is right and wise. We should know where it will lead us before we begin to practice the fad of the moment.

One of the most compelling of the present day fancies is the craze for the "boyish form." To be fatt is the nightmare. To be slender and willowy is the day dream.

Whither is this fad leading us? What will its pursuit cost us in health, vigor and length of days?

There can be no doubt that danger lurks in this practice of forced reduction. The health of many a misguided woman is being undermined by her efforts to be thin.

Lowered resistance, from the lack of essential food, prepares the way for disease invasion. The use of dangerous drugs for fat reduction is the first step toward physical disaster.

In short, this craze for slenderness and thinness is a foolish, dangerous, unworthy ambition. It is time for you to think about it seriously. It is time for you to realize what may happen if you continue to travel this route.

I cannot understand how any wise person can take a chance on the destruction of health by resorting to powerful medicines, violent exercises, surgical operations, and abstinence from nourishing and sustaining foods. These vital organs and tissues of ours are too delicate and too easily deranged to justify ventures into unnecessary practices which may prove seriously damaging. Life and limb may be endangered by them.

If you owned a horse and treated it as many persons do their bodies in order to reduce, you would be arrested for cruelty to animals, fined $500 and possibly sent to prison for five years. Society would not tolerate such cruel and indecent treatment of a dumb animal.

Suppose you habitually took away from the horse all his oats and half his hay; strapped him in a thick blanket and housed him in a close, hot box-stall; hitched him to a cart and lashed him into full speed, keeping it up for hours at a time—would that be considered cruelty by the average jury? It would be and no excuse of yours could reduce the penalty of the law. You would cry in vain that you were trying to make the horse better looking, to give it a "coltish form."

You smile at this, but fail to apply the thought to your painful, damaging and unscientific attempts at making your body different than nature intended it to be.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE SUBSTITUTE HUSBAND

HOW fair art thou, oh my Beloved! How comely, and full of modesty!

Lo, thou art more polished than a dancing master, more tender than a summer romance, and more COMPANIONATE than an husband!

Behold thou art my delight, morning and evening, and my solace at all times!

* * *

Thou greetest me, at dawn, with a happy "Cheerio!" Thou dost not visit the before-breakfast grouch upon me. Thou does not splash up the bathroom. Thou readest not the newspapers in my presence, nor growlest behind thy coffee-cup! Thou art always a merry little sunshine within the house!

HELEN ROWLAND

Thou are not afflicted with MOODS; and dyspepsia is not IN thee. When I would be gay, thou respondest with jocose words and merry song. But when I would be silent, thou knowest enough to SHUT UP.

Thou speakest always at the right moment and in a voice of silver. Thou dost not answer me in grunts and monosyllables and swear words. Thou art silent, at my command.

Lo, thou art filled with wisdom and with GOOD ADVICE! And whatsoever I wish to know, that dost thou tell me, cheerfully and without moralizing.

Thou art never distrait nor surly at dinner time, but full of sweetness and light and pleasant quips. Thou dost not get "that tired feeling!"

Thou flingest not thine ashes nor thy garments to the four winds; thou never howlest for a clean handkerchief. Thou complainest not at the price of my hats, nor criticizest the cut of my hair. My charge accounts do not rouse thine ire.

In the evening thou art always beside me; for thou hast not a "going foot." Clubs do not entice thee from me, and thou wanderest not to the midnight poker party, nor looketh upon the wine when it is red. I do not lie awake nights wondering where thou art!

When company cometh, thou art always at my right hand to brighten the evening.

Thou fillest in the pauses in the conversation: thou drownest the prattle of the bore and husheth the vacant laughter of fools and dimwits. Thou makest no "bad breaks."

Verily, verily, all the days of my life shall I cleave unto thee and rejoice in thee; and NO man shall ever supplant thee in my heart!

For thou art better company than a Pomeranian, more comforting than a Persian cat, and more chummy than a pal.

Yes, though I cannot run my fingers through thine hair nor lay my head upon thy shoulder, yet why shall I desire an HUSBAND, so long as thou art with me? For better than twenty husbands is a GOOD RADIO!

For Plump And Dainty Elbows

By MARIA JERITZA

THE more beautiful your elbows are, the less conspicious they will be. Like the knee, the elbow should be slender, dimpled, supple, creamy white tipped with pink, dainty, but very little in evidence, even when exposed to view.

Like lovely knees, beautiful elbows are very rare, indeed. A clumsy, self-conscious person is inclined to be "all elbows." Her "uneducated elbows" insist on protruding stiffly at odd angles, and are usually bumpy and discolored.

All arm exercises add to the suppleness and grace of the elbows. You will not, I am sure, find a better exercise for developing the symmetry and limberness of both your elbows and your arms than the following:

STAND with your feet about 12 inches apart, your neck and back straight, your weight over the balls of your feet. Lift your arms straight out from your shoulders. Tense your arms, clinch your fists and bring them up under your armpits. From this position, keeping your hands clinched, bring them up and as far around your shoulders as you can. Return to first position. Repeat this exercise 10 times. Doesn't it give a fine pull to the muscles of your shoulders, elbows, arms, wrists and hands? I hope you will keep it on your list and practice it every morning.

The woman who immerses herself in a tubful of warm water each day, for her cleansing bath, remaining in the water about 10 minutes, is likely to have good-looking elbows, other things being equal. For her elbows get a daily soaking in warm soapsuds, which they need to keep them soft and clean, and also a brisk rubbing with a Turkish towel, to stimulate circulation and give them a touch of pink.

IF your elbows are discolored for any reason, rub fresh lemon juice into them a few moments before your bath, every day, until the condition is remedied. Or, if you prefer, rub over each elbow a cross-section of fresh lemon. If they are very rough and calloused, gently massage them with a cake of pumice stone when you scrub them. Daily scrubbing with a nail-brush and soapsuds should be part of their toilette.

Application of hand lotion each day should help to keep your elbows soft and white, and an occasional cold-cream bath will benefit them. If they are scrawny, they should be massaged every night with skin food, applied on your finger-tips with a rotary movement.

Dainty pink and white elbows are such an exquisite item of loveliness that you cannot afford to neglect the simple daily attention which will make them all they should be by the time the bathing season opens, and will add so much to their appearance whenever you wear a sleeveless evening gown.

Crystal Shoulder Pins

Turning a cold shoulder is quite the fashionable gesture for the girl in evening attire, for clear crystal shoulder pins has a most icy glitter. Resembling a small, oblong cake of ice, such a pin has a round, many-faceted crystal at each end.

Wide Scarves

One of the smart shops is showing large double width chiffon scarves. These are to be worn with the tailleur and with chiffon dresses, and as they are most attractive and flattering, I prophesy that they will become quite the rage.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Sixteen Billions of Stock Sales; Public Joins Orgy.

By B. C. FORBES

WALL STREET still is indulging in the greatest speculative jamboree in its history. Transactions on the New York Stock Exchange since January 1 have exceeded the par value of $16,000,000,000, an increase of more than $4,000,000,000 over a year ago, and of $10,000,000,000 over 1924. Meanwhile bond transactions have been running below a year ago, two years ago and three years ago.

Plainly, the mania is for speculation, not for investment.

THE speculative fever has not been confined to New York. Take San Francisco. The 1927 volume was eight times that of 1923, and an increase of 82 per cent over the 1926 total. George P. West, of Californians, Inc., writes that "there is every indication" that trading this year will show a further expansion of more than 50 per cent. San Francisco is erecting a $1,250,000 stock exchange building, and "seats on the exchange have already reached a value equal to that of seats on the New York Stock Exchange of 20 years ago." In January of last year the price was $42,000; in November $100,000.

Similar growth in stock trading is reported by the Detroit Stock Exchange. The 1927 increase over 1926 was almost 90 per cent, and this year the volume of business is again breaking all records.

ALL this means that the speculative jazz whooped up by powerful gamblers has set the rest of the country dancing.

Old-timers well know that the greater the public's participation in speculative orgies, the more violent the relapse is likely to be. Just what will happen to stop the wild ongoings nobody can foretell. Doctors tell you that when a constitution is all shot to pieces some form of sickness is bound to develop. So is it with speculation when it attains a state of recklessness such as is now prevailing.

AN Arkansas Pass (Tex.) correspondent writes that the Humble Pipe Line Company, which "already has invested more than $12,000,000 in its pipe line system terminating here," is to spend as much more, and that its new refinery "is taking form rapidly: a village similar to wartime cities built by the government is springing into existence at Ingleside Station." He also states that "the Humble is under contract with West Texas fields to handle some 200,000 barrels per day, beginning next month."

I have noticed lately that Humble Oil shares have been holding up impressively.

PERHAPS you have heard that certain far-flung corporations are now buying airships to carry their directing heads hither and thither. The airship promises to become an important factor in this connection.

Now comes the New York American with "the first all-American business tour by air, a 10,000-mile journey in the New York American Toledo Leadership monoplane that will touch 40 cities." The purpose, says an authoritative announcement:

"Firstly—Equipped with the most elaborate radio set ever installed in an airplane, it will demonstrate through constant communication with the ground the feasibility of a business executive directing his organization from the air.

"Secondly—Richard J. Wall, prominent Toledo business man and representative of the National Safety Council, is making the flight to gather data to demonstrate the safety of the airplane business.

"Thirdly—It will illustrate the speed of aviation by visiting numerous cities on the same day for business purposes. Appointments will be made by radio while the plane is in the air."

The results should keenly interest business men whose time is valuable.

A BANK OF ITALY officer, F. R. Kerman, differs with the opinion expressed here and elsewhere that business in California has not been good. He writes in part:

"As a matter of fact, California business is good. The current bulletin of the Federal Reserve Bank here shows that for the entire twelfth district the retail business is considerably better than it was during the first two months of last year. California, in particular, has shown a healthy gain. The figures for the city of San Francisco in February were 7.8 per cent better than during the same month a year ago. In Los Angeles the increase was 1.5 per cent, and in Oakland 5.2 per cent. The southern portion of the state as a whole reflected an average increase of 6.6 per cent, while the northern district showed 7.2 per cent increase. This compares with an average gain of 2.2 per cent for the entire nation.

"Mr. Giannini and Mr. Bacigalupi (president of the Bank of Italy) have, of course, been interested in discouraging speculation in Bank of Italy and Bancitaly Corporation shares. At the same time, they would be the last people to suggest that the stock market has resulted in any harm to general business conditions. As a matter of fact, as the result of the enrichment of so many who have invested in the stock of Bank of Italy and Bancitaly Corporation, the ultimate benefits to be derived must inevitably find reflection in the increased prosperity of California as a whole."

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, March 24—Owing largely to a forecast of unsettled weather southwest, indicating likelihood of improved moisture supply, wheat prices averaged lower early today. Deferred deliveries proved most responsive to the better outlook and went to a wider discount under May. Opening ⅛@⅝c decline, wheat kept near to the initial range.

Corn, oats and provisions were also easier, corn starting ⅛@½c off, and subsequently undergoing an additional sag.

With rains in prospect, many wheat traders today showed a disposition to see what spring will do to the winter crop rather than to judge the market on an end-of-the-winter basis. Meanwhile, bear leaders pointed out that the United States wheat visible supply is the largest since 1919 at this season of the year and that there will have to be unusual decreases to reduce stocks materially between now and the first of May and the first of July.

Corn prices today were more or less influenced by selling based on the fact that hog values are down to about the lowest of this year's prices. Besides, notice was taken that planting of the new corn crop has started in the southern part of the belt, and that corn acreage is reported as likely to be increased almost 3 per cent.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, March 24—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 3 to 6 points on covering and a little local buying, promoted by prospects for showers in the eastern belt over Sunday. The advance met further realizing or liquidation. Prices eased off a few points after the call, but soon stiffened up again on renewed covering, while there also appeared to be a little trade buying. Business was quiet and the bulk of it was attributed to evening up of accounts for over the week-end.

Private cables said there had been hedge selling, but the market there absorbed it by trade calling and local buying.

The amount of cotton on shipboard at the end of the week awaiting clearance was estimated at 90,000 bales, against 185,000 bales last year.

Range on cotton futures reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

STOCKS QUIET IN NARROW MARKET HERE

GENERAL LIST IS STEADY

Transactions on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange were in moderate volume in the short week-end session today, with the price trend disclosing no important change from the market movements of the past week.

The tendency of the market here was to rest while the real activity of the day continued in New York. The amazing performance of General Motors in the big market was so overwhelming in its influence that the trading community seemed satisfied to stand aside and let the stock have the full swing of the day.

There was a little trading in Standard Sanitary here with the price hovering around the new level of $34 a share, reached Friday on a moderate selling movement which started around $35. Standard's first quarter is understood to have been rather quiet, but with the building industry continuing its strides forward there appears to be a favorable outlook for the company over the spring and the ensuing months up to the break of the weather in the late fall. Dividend action will be taken on the new stock in a few weeks and it is expected a $2 annual rate will be established. Results for the first quarter will permit this comfortably, according to local traders fairly well posted on the company.

Carnegie Metals did not enter the trading in any noticeable manner today. The stock was handled in small amounts at around 26½, comparing with yesterday's high of 27. Lone Star Gas was quiet as were the other fuel issues. There were no changes recorded in the miscellaneous manufacturing group.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

Trading at the local wholesale produce district for all lines of fruit and vegetables was fair today. Asparagus was lower, while all other vegetables were sold at about unchanged quotations. The fruit market was fairly active. No change was made in the prices.

Poultry supplies were very short and the market was firm, with the demand good. Live heavy and Leghorn hens were higher.

The cheese market was steady and the quotations were unchanged. Butter and eggs were firm. Current receipts were 1c higher per dozen.

Carlot supplies were fairly liberal, a total of 3?? cars being on track. Arrivals included 11 cars of apples, 5 cabbage, 1 carrots, 13 celery, 4 grapefruit, 1 lemons, 9 lettuce, 2 oranges, 5 spinach, 4 potatoes, 4 sweet potatoes, 1 tomatoes and 1 turnips.

MENTION THE SUN-TELEGRAPH WHEN ANSWERING ADVERTISEMENTS.

G. M., LEADING RISE, CLIMBS PEAK

NEW YORK, March 24.—(AP.)—General Motors, climbing 4⅝ points to a new high record at 191¾, led another sharp upturn in prices in today's stock market. Heavy week-end profit-taking sales cut down some of the earlier gains, which ran 1 to 10 points, and sent a scattering of issues below yesterday's final quotations. The day's sales ran over 2,000,000 shares.

The buying in General Motors undoubtedly received impetus from the prediction of John J. Raskob, chairman of the finance committee, that first quarter earnings would average $4 a share on the common stock, and that the half year's earnings would reach $9 a share. Except for the further withdrawal of $3,000,000 in gold for export to South America, there were no financial or business developments of importance during the day.

Violent fluctuations again took place in the high-priced specialties, General Motors and Du Pont each soared nearly 10 points. Buying of Hudson Motors, which advanced 2 points, was influenced by rumors of a 25 per cent stock dividend at next week's meeting of directors. Hupp and Packard also were strong.

Realizing sales were most effective in such issues as American Smelting, Atlas Powder, Adams Express and Collins and Aikman.

The closing was irregular.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Raskob Bullish on GMO.

J. J. Raskob, chairman of the finance committee of General Motors Corporation, predicted on his departure for Europe this morning, that the stock of General Motors Company will sell much higher than its current levels. "If the market holds, General Motors is bound to sell much higher," he said. "At present prices, General Motors is selling at around 12 times its earning power. Recent compilations show that 20 representative industrial stocks, including U. S. Steel, are selling at 15 to 16 times their earnings. I believe General Motors should sell at the same proportionate rate." Mr. Raskob stated that earnings of the corporation for the first six months of this year would approximate about $9 a share, so that he anticipated a market value for the stock in the neighborhood of $240 to $250 a share. Current business, Mr. Raskob declared, is running 30 per cent above last year. He added that a fair average rate of increase for the first two quarters of 1928 would be 25 per cent. He expressed confidence in the outlook for general business and for the automobile business and anticipates a record production and sales level for this year.

Motors Floating Supply.

In view of General Motors' almost uninterrupted advance from 135 in the last few weeks, market observers have been watching closely for signs of liquidation on part of the strong pool in the issue, which is sponsored by interests close to the management. However, indications of any important selling have not been discernible. On the contrary, buying of good character appears in the stock on the slightest setbacks. Although the corporation has 17,400,000 shares outstanding, steady accumulation of General Motors is estimated to have reduced the supply available for trading purposes to less than 2,000,000 shares.

Loans and Business.

Morton F. Stern of J. S. Bache & Co., sailing today, said: "The optimism prevailing in Wall street is certainly greater than is generally felt by business men throughout the country. It would be a trite saying to predict that either the business of the country will have to pick up materially or stock prices, in a great many instances, will be adjusted downward. Loans approximating $4,000,000 do not seem to trouble speculators and investors. Short selling which has been attempted both for corrective measures and also for profits, has furnished the basis for a continued advance in prices. We have heard of $5,000,000,000 spoken of as the peak of loans before the present market will be over, but it is my opinion that this amount will not be available for market purposes and we should run into a substantial price adjustment long before this figure is reached. The basis for this statement is the fact that if business of this country goes ahead rapidly enough to justify present price levels, there will not be sufficient money available to allow $5,000,000,000 of brokerage loans to be reached. If business does not improve rapidly the market result is self evident."

Cleveland Cliffs Iron.

Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company reports for the year 1927, net profit of $3,95?,496, after all charges, equal to $9.75 a common share, as compared with $1,729,6?7, or $4.32 a common share for 1926. Sale of timber properties was chiefly responsible for the large increase in earnings.

Accessories Active.

The automotive parts and accessory business has gone through one of its best first quarters in recent years and appears likely to go through the first half with a high volume of production and sales, says the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' Association. The past month was a record February in shipments from manufacturing plants. January also showed greater volume than any of the last three years.

Asphalt's Net Lower.

The General Asphalt Company pamphlet report for year 1927, shows net income was $1,329,179 after depreciation, interest, federal taxes, etc., equal after preferred dividends to $4.73 a share on 266,917 common shares, against $2,061,991, or $8.11 a share on 291,115 shares in 1926.

A. W. Sewall, president of the company, reports to stockholders that a better market for petroleum products is indicated for later on in the year and with continuance of activity in the building trades at improved prices the returns to its subsidiaries in those branches should also result in increased profits. Last year's earnings, he points out, were adversely affected by lower prices for oils and for building products, and by the fact that marketing of refrigeration units was suspended awaiting improvements in design, which have been put into successful operation.

BUYS GROUP OF APARTMENTS IN WILKINSBURG

A group of apartments at 200-04 Franklin street and 405 Peebles street, Wilkinsburg, lot 40x100 feet, has been sold by Hyman J. Shapiro to Mrs. Emma Michaelowski for $65,000. In part payment at a valuation of $39,000, Mrs. Michaelowski deeded 28x100 feet with a hotel and restaurant at Penn avenue and Twenty-eighth street. The United States Realty Company were the brokers.

The Freehold Real Estate Company has delivered the deed to Stewart C. McFarland for an 11-room stone and shingle California bungalow in Apache road, Brookside Farms, for $20,000. The same brokers sold for the Allegheny-Bellevue Land Company to Chester Willoughby three lots in Center avenue, West View. The buyer will build three brick dwellings.

Frank T. Lauinger has sold for Anne L. Vilsack to Ella B. Kerr an 11-room brick house on 42x117 feet at 4720 Bayard street. The property has been held at $25,000.

The Horner Real Estate Company has sold the business known as the Little Luncheon Room at 210 Oliver avenue for Elsie Stoecker to Edith Hamshire, Nan West and Arch West. The purchasers have already taken possession.

The Stevenson, Williams Company sold for Carlo Oschiute to Jack London a seven-room English type brick house and garage on 50x125 feet in Beverly road, Mt. Lebanon, for $14,500.

William H. Shumaker has purchased from Charles F. Reeves 225x125 feet of vacant in Cresson street between Grant and Glenn streets, Wilkinsburg. The buyer is planning to build nine houses on the ground. J. A. Young & Company closed the deal.

Joseph E. Daly has sold to Benjamin Leff a house on a lot 20x92 feet at Broad street, Eleventh Ward, for $12,300.

Building permit applications included:

Twentieth Ward—Board of Public Education, field house and bleachers for Langley athletic field, Chartiers avenue, $22,900.

Fifteenth Ward—H. E. and T. M. Watson, brick dwelling, 706 Graphic street, $5,000.

First Ward—D. F. Shanahan, alterations, Forbes and Magee streets, $4,000.

MEDLEY RUNS WELL TO DOWN FAVORITE

NEW ORLEANS, March 24.—An excellent ride by H. Richards landed P. Reuter's four-year-old colt Medley first in the six furlong fifth race, the feature yesterday. Polygamie, owned by B. B. Rice, was a fast finishing second and Mrs. S. Mayberry's Eloise, favorite, was third. The winner paid $5.80 in the mutuels.

CHEATED, SHE SOBS

MAE MURRAY

Mae Murray, film actress, was near tears when she told a Los Angeles judge she had paid $50,000 for a house she later learned was worth but half that amount. She is suing Jack Donovan, film actor and architect, to rescind the contract. Miss Murray claims the deal was made under soft lights and to the strains of music, but when seen by daylight, she declares the furniture was faded and not antique. The defense claims no misrepresentation was made.

WHY PICTURES? ASKS ART HEAD

"Why pictures, after all?" asked Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts at Carnegie Institute, as he left last night for Europe to select paintings for 1928 International Exposition to open here in October.

"I often wondered what it was all about," Director Saint-Gaudens continued, "and if the canvases lined up in the galleries for people to look at are really worth the tremendous amount of time and energy consumed in the chase.

"But now, to me, pictures in the galleries (and ultimately in the home) are the logical and last step in the sudden renaissance in interest in decoration taking place all over this country of ours. You see it in furniture, in advertisements, in fabrics, in kitchen utensils, in all the everyday objects so much a part of our lives. It is a good sign.

"And I have seen some stunning advertisements of plumbing and kitchen utensils," Saint-Gaudens said, "and some day people will realize that occasionally these advertisements are more amusing to look upon than many of the inept reproductions they have hung on their walls at home. That is where the art director steps in."

The International will open at Carnegie Institute October 18, and continued until December 10. An entirely new group of artists will be represented this year. Mr. Saint-Gaudens will return to Pittsburgh the latter part of June.

AUTO THIEVES RETURNED

Because neither Walter Fedin, 17, or Mike Kelbish, 18, both of South Bingham street, had driven an automobile before, they got only to Chambersburg when they attempted to take a stolen machine to Philadelphia. They were arrested there when the car stalled and were brought back to Pittsburgh last night. Today in Morals Court they admitted stealing the car, owned by August Hauman, of 2245 Wilson avenue, and were held for court.

TAKES SUITCASE AS AUTOIST EATS LUNCH

While an automobile owned by C. E. Shank of Indiana, Pa., was parked in Seventh avenue, near Grant street, last night, a robber stole a suit case valued at about $30. Police found no trace of the robber. The theft occurred while Shank was in a nearby restaurant.

LIBRARY MINE HEADS BEATEN; NAB STRIKERS

Attacked while walking along to Library road last night, Charles S. Lidlaugh, superintendent of the school mine of the Bertha Consumers Company, and R. S. Jaminson, assistant superintendent, suffered bruises and cuts about the face and hands, according to a report to Sergt. J. H. Hughes, in charge of the state police detail at Library.

The men were going home, they told police, when two men pounced on them from the side of the road. Lidlaugh and Jaminson beat off their adversaries, they said, and called the state police.

The troopers arrested Anthony Royer, 42, and Frank Zupancic, 27, both striking miners of Library, on charges of disorderly conduct. They were arraigned before Justice of the Peace P. J. Burke, of Library, who ordered them held under $100 bail each, pending a hearing next Tuesday.

Western Bodies Renew Attacks On Ring Law

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—The gong has rung for the second round in California's fight against the state boxing law.

Attorney General Webb has mailed to Los Angeles the title on the prize fight initiative, requested by the State Federation. The title will be made public today.

Simultaneously with the attorney general's action it became known that state agricultural organizations were to take part in the fray.

Senator Herbert C. Jones of San Jose, has been asked to head up a movement in the state to appeal legislation permitting prize fights and to draft a resolution to be presented to state-wide agricultural organizations.

BRITISH FILM CENSOR

MRS. PHILLIP SNOWDEN

Mrs. Philip Snowden has been named on the British Film Committee, appointed to censor all films, foreign as well as English, before they are shown in Great Britain, which is launching at this time a drive to popularize "made-at-home" motion pictures.

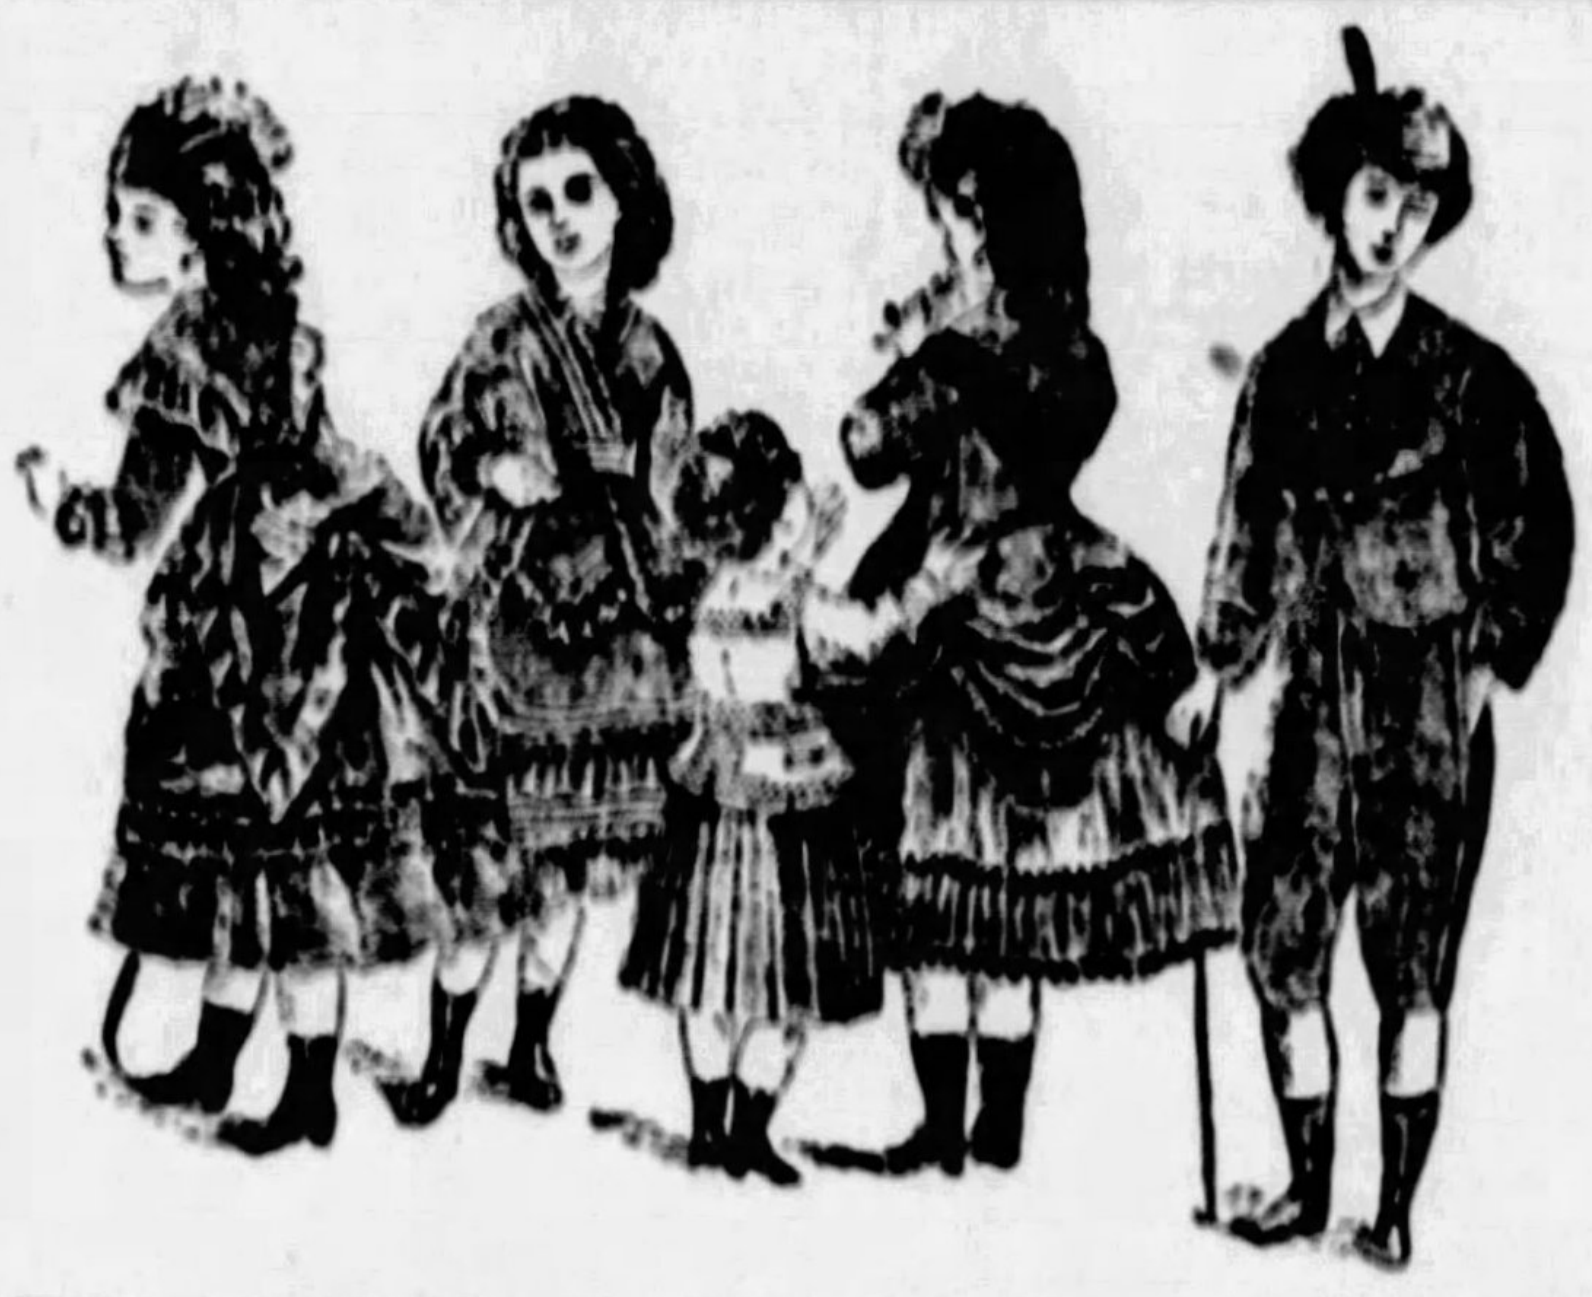
HERE'S CHANCE FOR YOU TO DO A KIND DEED



THIS little girl has lost her mother. If you, by chance, are acquainted with the mother, please call the police, the Chamber of Commerce, Travelers' Aid or some other public service group. Unfortunately, we do not know the child's name. We don't even know in what city the unhappy incident occurred. We just happened to run across the picture during our home reading and thought something ought to be done about it.

Says the Rev. Mr. Wiley:

"There doesn't seem to be any way to break flappers' necks."

* * *

"Bootleg liquor," continues the Rev. Mr. Wiley, "seems to be suffering from an inferiority complex."

By the way, what has become of all the old Ford jokes?

BUGS BAER Says

PRICE of furniture in the New York Stock Exchange is now $325,000 per seat.

At this price nobody is going to get a dining room set together.

When chairs get that expensive it is dangerous to relax.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

We were present in the stock exchange when radio and general mutters were scraping the skin off the ceiling.

It was a very industrious panic.

If a chair was worth $325,000 in that luxurious barbecue of the shorts, then a chair leg would have been worth a million.

We had four dollars to invest in the loudest noise. Owing to the lack of space between margins and call money, we finally picked out Carnegie Library as the only steady proposition.

That always opens at 9 and closes at 10.

Indict Blackmer and O'Neil And Clear Up Oil Scandal

The suggestion made by the Hearst newspapers that indictments be handed down against James E. O'Neil and H. M. Blackmer in connection with their part in the Fall-Sinclair oil-lease scandal, has been approved in high quarters.

Ample evidence has been adduced indicating that Blackmer and O'Neil were in a conspiracy to defraud the stockholders by the sale of oil at an agreed advance of 25 cents a barrel. The proper procedure would seem to be their indictment and extradition as fugitives from justice.

The presence of Blackmer and O'Neil in this country, so that they may be compelled to reveal their knowledge of the manipulations in the oil deal, is necessary to the clearing up of a scandal that has outraged all good citizens.

That these men should be permitted to flee the country and calmly await the expiration of the time limit fixed by statute, thus flouting the Senate and the courts of the United States, makes justice seem futile, indeed.

Blackmer and O'Neil should be forced to tell, or suffer appropriate punishment, what they know about the raising of a $3,000,000 corruption fund, by the sale of oil, and who got that part of the money still untraced. Their residence abroad and reliance upon the statute of limitations should not be tolerated. Their indictment as urged by the Hearst papers seems the obvious course.

New Power Trust Tactics

When the San Francisquito Dam broke and drowned 400 persons, the people of Southern California were plunged in grief.

The calamity enlisted the sympathy of the American people.

Its mysterious cause is under investigation by the foremost engineering minds of the country.

Meanwhile, the power trust lobby is busy putting the badge of public ownership on the tragedy.

It was a dam constructed by public authority, part of the water system of the Los Angeles Bureau of Power and Light. If it had been privately constructed and operated, it would not have broken. So runs the argument.

And, they continue, this calamity warns against having the government build the proposed dam at Boulder Canyon on the Colorado River.

The Wall Street Journal, chief organ of the private power interests, solemnly announces that "the hand of fate has warned Congress to go slow over new water projects." The Wall Street Journal sneers at the intelligence of "patrons of such schemes as Muscle Shoals or Boulder Dam." It goes on:

"Whatever else the recent calamity has done, it has probably given these grandiose Colorado River projects (Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam) a black eye which will make itself felt throughout the present session of Congress."

For the information of the Wall Street Journal, Muscle Shoals is not a Colorado River project, but a development of the United States government, on the Tennessee River in Alabama.

It is hard to remember a more ghoulish and contemptible use of public calamity to serve private interests.

At the present time there is not the slightest decent reason to suspect that public ownership had anything to do with the California dam disaster.

Congress will see through such specious and malicious pleas.

If Jail Air Is Impure Changes Should Be Made

An order by the court permitting the removal of a Federal prisoner from the Allegheny County Jail to the Westmoreland County jail in Greensburg is based on grounds that warrant an investigation of our jail by the grand jury.

The prisoner, a sufferer from tuberculosis, asked to be removed because he feared the scanty supply of fresh air in the Allegheny county prison would result in shortening his life, whereas it might be prolonged if he were placed in an institution where there is a plentiful supply of good air. Indication that the court agreed with him is contained in the order issued for his removal.

If the air of the local prison is not good for prisoners in ill health it certainly is not good for anybody, no matter what the state of their bodily health may be. Because some are constitutionally strong enough to endure it is no reason why their strength should be so taxed. There is justice in depriving a person of liberty for cause. That, naturally, involves other restrictions that do not occur in normal life, but, certainly, a prisoner should not be denied air, the freest thing in the world—and the most necessary.

Abolish Selfishness

In 1,000,000 Years, Perhaps

Russia at a peace league conference formally offered to make peace real by scrapping all armament. Of course that would not make peace last any longer than it would take to build 500 flying machines and produce a few tons of poison gas and explosives—about eight weeks. But the offer embarrassed the big Allies that have no intention to disarm.

Now Russia refuses any share in the League of Nations plan to enforce certain economic principles for world-wide reconstruction. Bolshevism thinks it has invented a new and better system of economics, abolishing among other things selfishness and accumulation of private property. When the Lenin dream is over, Russia will know that human nature is not easily changed.

We made that discovery in our well meant attempt at prohibition.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Whale

THIS does not refer to the celestial Whale (Cetus), the largest constellation in the heavens, but to the favorite of the readers of the Book of Jonah and of Herman Melville's "Moby Dick"—the monster of terrestial oceans, which, it is said, we are now fast driving into extinction.

Some of the learned experts employed by the League of Nations have reported that the remaining number of whales is not over 12,000. At least 1,500 are killed in the Antarctic every year. That was the statement published at the end of 1925. How many are left now?

Considering the extent of the oceans, and that whales apparently can go where they like in their vast domain, any attempt to take a census of them may seem chimerical—but then the experts ought to know.

Only 12,000 whales left in the ocean! What a lonely life But, if statistics are true, this remnant of a once mighty race seems to have drawn together around the borders of the Antarctic ice as if seeking comfort in the assemblage of numbers, as sheep draw together and press their woolly bodies into contact amidst the whitened air of a snow blizzard.

But, as pointed out in a book on polar research just published by the American Geographical Society, the Antarctic waters form a poor place of refuge for the persecuted whales. Those waters "are now the scene of a ruthless and reckless slaughter of those creatures of the deep whose protection from extermination is a matter of interest to mankind generally."

The Antarctic is a deceptive sanctuary because nobody owns it. To be sure several nations, led by Great Britain, lay claim to it, but nobody inhabits the huge, lofty, ice-rimmed continent that caps the southern pole of the earth's axis and is surrounded by an unbroken ring of deep sea which lies broadly open on all sides to the other oceans but has no harbors. Says David Hunter Miller in the book mentioned above:

"The Antarctic region is of present importance only in connection with sea life. There is no question of future air transit as in the Arctic; any form of mineral wealth is no more than a remote possibility of the unknown, nor can we today visualize any settlement or occupation in the ordinary sense of any part of the Antarctic continent. National territorial jurisdiction if exercised could seemingly touch only those visitors engaged in whaling or sealing or in exploration."

The whale is not alone in seeking refuge around the inhospitable south polar region. Other inhabitants of the sea that man has found comfort and prosperity for himself in running down and slaying with all the devices of scientific civilization—such as he uses against members of his own race when advantage or jealousy and hatred urge him that way—have apparently fled thither also.

But the whale is a fighter, as both history and romance prove. He is as merciless and as resourceful as man himself when his blood is up or his stomach empty.

"Shoals of destructive killer whales," says Robert Cushman Murphy, "remain throughout the year as far south as open water can be found; indeed, these creatures sometimes break up heavy sea ice with the apparent object of precipitating their prey into the water. Crab-eater seals are said to be the most frequent victims owing to their liking for the pack ice."

They are marking whales now in the far south by shooting bronze markers into their outer blubber, where they stick fast; somewhat as birds are marked with rings on their legs. It will be a sad day for zoology when the last whale has been harpooned with a whale-gun. Such thoughts carry one back to "Captain Ahab," who went down tangled in his own line, along with his stricken enemy, the "White Whale"—at once victim and victor.

Tips a Vanity

THE average porter of a Pullman car gets $870 a year from the Pullman Company in wages and $672 from its patrons in tips.

Because the Interstate Commerce Commission found no law under which it could force the employer to pay higher wages or the passengers to stop giving tips, Pullman porters are talking strike.

What the passenger pays for Pullman service seems enough to cover both the company's just claims and the porter's pay. But whatever the porter's pay, tipping is not likely to stop, because it is a pet vanity of the well-to-do.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Don't Boast

POSSIBLY you have too high an opinion of your own judgment.

In your own line you have been able to make strong and practical deductions.

But the person you rate as lacking in good judgment may far excel you in lines other than those in which you are engaged.

You have made a great success in what you have undertaken.

Another person might have followed an entirely different course in accomplishing what you have to your credit.

Perhaps the other fellow is a success, also, in his business.

But because his business does not entail the mass of details you contend with, you don't figure him as possessing as good judgment as you.

But he is at the top of what he undertook to do.

And so are you.

But who shall say that one is greater than the other?

You might not do as well in his line as he does, and vice versa.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

Renewal

GREEN banners Earth once more unfolds
And far hills gleam with marigolds,
The air is stirred with thrill of wings,
With throb of myriad blossomings.

On every hand a miracle
Of singing birds and buds that swell
The waking fields and woods disclose:
That which was dust is now a rose!

Dear Lord, if these, Thy children, too,
May with such joy their life renew,
Grant us new strength to take again
Into our hands the tangled skein.

Fresh courage that will fitly meet
All issues, triumph or defeat,
And may our souls green banners fling,
Our spirits know sweet tides of spring.

Tales that are Told

Soda Water—Neat!

IT WAS a striking coincidence that the new assistant at a certain soda-fountain had been dubbed a half-wit by a regular customer, and that the individual who approached him also happened to be the possessor of one of those fractional intellects.

"A glass of plain soda without any flavor," was the latter's order.

"Without what flavor?" asked the man behind the counter.

His customer pondered this before replying, and then answered:

"Without strawberry flavor."

"But you can't have it without strawberry flavor," objected the other semi-idiot, "'cause we haven't any. You'll have to have it without vanilla!"

What Was Coming

WEARY WILLIE walked into the pawnbroker's and laid a portable wireless set upon the counter.

"How much do I get for this?" he inquired casually of the man behind the counter.

The proprietor examined the wireless set thoroughly and turned to an assistant standing near by.

"Close the door, George," he said, and turned back to Weary Willie, who looked a little uncomfortable.

"You'll get two months for this," said the pawnbroker. "I only sold it to a customer yesterday."

No Wonder

THE bus had suddenly struck a patch of very bad road and the conductor, taken unawares, was thrown off his balance. On regaining it he accidentally stepped on a not-too-young-looking woman's toe.

A violent argument ensued, which was finally terminated by the conductor demanding his opponent's fare.

"Liverpool Street Station," she snapped, tendering a coin.

"Single?" asked the conductor.

"Yes," she snapped again.

The conductor looked her up and down maliciously, taking particular notice of her bandy legs.

"H'm," he murmured as a parting shot, "I'm not surprised."—Exchange.

For Services Rendered

A CERTAIN magistrate who was writing a book on criminology always made a point of asking prisoners up before him how they went about their work.

It so happened that on one occasion a well-known pickpocket stood in the dock.

"How is it that you managed to extract this man's watch from his pocket without him knowing anything about it?" asked the magistrate, with his kindliest smile.

The prisoner in the dock considered the question an indelicate one. He glared at the magistrate for a minute or two. Then, drawing himself up proudly, he made answer:

"My fee, your Honor, is two guineas for the full course of six lessons!"—London Answers.

Slow But Sure

BURGLARS were visiting the home of the Newlyweds when suddenly a chair was accidentally overturned. The burglars held their breath and waited. The noise had awakened the mistress of the house.

"Jack, Jack!" she cried. "There's burglars in the house—in the pantry! Wake up!"

Her sleeping spouse turned over wearily and listened for a second or so.

"You're right, dear," he murmured sleepily. "But that's all right. Don't worry, they won't die before they get out of the house."

Having It Illustrated

ALTHOUGH it was the festive season, and Buxton, the family butcher, was expecting plenty of orders, he was rather surprised when a slim young woman entered the shop and asked for twenty-five pounds of beef.

All the same, he cut off the joint and put it on the scales to be weighed up.

"Will you take it with you, or shall I send it round to the house?" he inquired as it came off the scales.

The slim young woman blushed prettily.

"Oh," she murmured. "I didn't want to buy it. You see, the doctor said I had lost twenty-five pounds and I wanted to see what it looked like in a lump."

O. O. McINTYRE

In London

LONDON, March 24.—I walked through Whitechapel district—the scene of the famous and terrifying murders—today on way to a restaurant in Soho noted for its kidney pudding. Soho has the jangle of the old Bowery of the swing-door saloon, concert hall and rule of the bung starter.

Poverty has always struck me as more depressing in London than in any other great city. There is no effort to throw it off. It is accepted with that calm submission the fatalist accepts what he regards as fate. Humanity is so undernourished it becomes leathery and dried out. It almost crackles.

Old, haggle-toothed men and women with faded, watery eyes totter forth early to the pubs to sit about all day in querulous resignation. Undernourished children are constantly rushing to and fro with pitchers of ale. Even noses of middle-aged women are tinted an alcoholic red.

The coster—a bit of a toff—with his bowler derby and coat of many pearl buttons swaggers about. He boasts proudly of living off women and is impudently aggressive. I turned in the sidewalk to gaze after one and he came back to inquire rather menacingly, "What'cher gettin' at?"

I attained that stage of nonchalance epitomized in such a brilliant reply as, "Who? Me?" and moved on. I have nothing in common with a coster. But I must tell you about the kidney pudding. It is the most savory dish in Albion—with a thick brown pie crust and a highly seasoned filling of kidney and rich sauce.

Accompanied by a pewter mug of creamy ale it offers the most satisfying meal found anywhere. I was told the Prince of Wales comes here frequently, but I do not believe there is a spot in London that does not boast of his patronage. One visit by His Highness and a place is made.

After luncheon we did some conventional rubber-necking, taxi-ing to London Tower, Old Bailey, circling Buckingham Palace, through Mayfair, the Strand, Fleet street, and putting in at the Cavendish to see Rosa Lewis, the famous proprietor-cook, and have tea. Rosa was in fine conversational form.

It is the young men of England who seem to symbolize national vitality. They have a clean, vibrant freshness. Their complexions and eyes are clear and there is a jaunty spring to their step. But the young ladies appear a trifle dowdy in comparison to American girls. Complexions are often mottled, hair is lusterless and teeth seem out of alignment. There is none of the flippancy so delightfully characteristic of the American flapper. The English girls seem gripped by haughty boredom. And the way they burn up cigarets is just a caution.

It is odd to see a billboard sign proclaiming: "Judges are drinking our whisky. So are M. P.'s." And there they were, too.

The charms of London are innumerable, but when such masters as Dickens, Thackeray and others have described them, it is a waste of space for others to try. The one outstanding topic here is prohibition. Punch's ban on liquor ads was a jolt. Conservative papers avoid the subject, but a flamboyant press is screaming hysterically dry England is near. The liquor selling restrictions are tightening yearly. Every article tending to show America as the "horrible example" of prohibition is featured by liquor propagandists.

English expressions are highly amusing. Today I met a young Britisher who said he was on his way "to snaffle a glass of beer." And over here they permit you to "out-snaffle" them for the bar chit, too. It is a tight little isle in more ways than one.

* * *

I expected to go farther afield this trip. My objective was Egypt and a buggy ride up the Nile. But after six weeks I am, as usual, fed up with Europe. So I embark on the Ile de France tonight at Plymouth—another poor old moth winging back to the Broadway flame.

The Price of Being Great

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

The greatest man that ever lived in this world was nailed to the cross and the passersby wagged their heads at him and reviled him.

Socrates was poisoned like a rat in a hole. Julius Caesar was stabbed to death.

Napoleon ended his days in lonely exile after receiving the homage of kings.

You may want to be great. You may want to be good and grand and sublime.

But if you think you are going to have an easy time being great you are mistaken. The penalty for greatness, at least while you live, is not ease and flattery, but persecution and that of the most annoying kind.

There is something in almost everybody that induces him to stick pins in a great man, to hurt him in some way.

I know one man who is great in character, kind, and self-poised in all his actions. His wife takes delight in nagging him. His children abuse his patience and almost everybody seems to have pleasure taking a knock at him.

Another man of national reputation whom I know was hired by a lecture bureau to deliver a lecture. He delivered it as agreed and paid his own expenses. The bureau collected the fee, but because they said the lecture was not satisfactory they did not turn over the money to him. He consulted a lawyer and the lawyer said it was better to suffer the loss than to enter into a long, and expensive law suit.

So a great man cannot kick any yapping dogs that bite his calves. He must be content to let the flies blow him and not strike them. He must let everybody cheat him and never strike back.

If you are going to have a good time and get all the sugar plums out of this existence you should be selfish and obscure.

Virtue is literally its own reward and unless you appreciate the inner satisfaction of knowing that you are a great soul you had better not try it.

Remember that it is the tallest oaks that are broken by the storm. The winds pass harmlessly over the lowly bush.

But perhaps you are of that temper of soul that prefers to be great no matter whether you are appreciated or not.

If so, more power to your arm!

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD.

BREACH of promise suits, propped up by damaging love letters are frightening men into a most uninteresting silence.

"And how are you going to hold 'em if you don't write?" asks one male.

"If they stay out of town long enough you'll lose 'em anyway," says another.

A United States Senator (his name deleted) boasts that he never wrote his wife a love letter during their courtship. They are happy and have grown children. He was always afraid of love letters.

It is all right to boast now, but the question is would he have won the lady had she known why he didn't write?

Mrs. Helen Hartough, social worker of Chicago, says that older people should encourage self-respect in children by listening to them and encouraging their own ideas.

Which reminds me that yesterday a teacher told me she had a 5-year-old boy in her class who talked entirely too much. She said to him in a kindly voice: "Johnnie, do you know that you talk so much I get very tired of hearing your voice?"

The child looked up and in perfect earnestness said: "Well, you do, too, and I get so tired of hearing you!"

And he meant it.

Peggy Cleary made $500,000 on the New York Exchange. Now she wants to spend $300,000 for a seat on the exchange and be the first woman to trade from the floor. Peggy is described as "chic, talkative, blonde and blue-eyed," and she says she got her first tip on General Motors.

Anita was right. If a man troubles to give a tip like that to a woman, she invariably is a blonde and chic.

Being a blonde, Peggy may get the seat, but their seats are what men are not giving to women these days.

If any medals are being given out this week, attention is called to the Brooklyn fireman who yesterday carried a 200-pound woman down a very long, bright red ladder, to save her from the flames. He "seen his duty and he done it." Oh for the life of a fireman!

Doris McDonald has been spared the gallows but must spend her life in prison.

I was talking about hangings with Clarence Darrow the other day, and he said:

"People seem so surprised that I don't want to hang anybody. If it would bring back the slain ones I would want to. About the best we can do is put ourselves in the wicked fellow's place. The Bible tells us to be charitable and forgiving. And EVERYBODY SEEMS SO SURPRISED WHEN SOMEBODY IS."

'Science Conscious'

HAVE you noticed how aviation and science are demanding their place in the news?

Most interesting is the fact that the stories are less and less concerned with personal exploits and more and more concerned with general advancement in the respective fields. We are beginning to get science "conscious."
